A Royal Legacy

Senior Charlie Glenny and Miranda Stieglitz won Winterfest king and queen for the 2017 Winterfest court.

The legacy that Stieglitz wanted to leave behind was, "I am glad to leave a legacy of hope and faith when coming Winterfest queen. To keep a smile on my face at all time and bring joy to everyone I see in the halls," Stieglitz said.

The legacy Glenny wanted to leave behind was to always be happy and smile.

"I was really happy and surprised to hear my name called," Glenny said.

A Poetic Legacy

Junior Grace Way wanted to leave a Poetry Out Loud legacy of not being afraid.

"The legacy I'd like to leave behind by doing Poetry Out Loud is don't be scared to show the world what you've got. It may have not been the world, but I know some people may have backed out because they didn't want to do it, but do it. Face your fears and get up there and try," Way said.

A Helping Legacy

Juniors Michelle Bollini, Benjamin Peterson, Emily Shrift, and Raigan Novotny all want to leave behind a Zonta legacy.

"I would like to leave behind the legacy of willing to help out reading to the elementary students," Bollini said.

Leaving behind a legacy of joining clubs and other academics is an important thing for many people.

"I would like to leave behind the legacy that by joining Zonta you CAN actually make a difference for women in our community; you're actually able to see the money you are raising during fundraisers be used for women in our community," Shrift said.

Leaving behind a legacy that is to help others in your community can make you feel great about yourself.

"I want to leave behind the idea that we can make a difference in other people's lives. We are always doing projects for the benefit of others, and I think it's really exciting," Novotnty said.

A legacy is helping out the community by spending your Friday night at Meijers with your Zonta friends - shopping for the women's homeless shelter as juniors Michelle Bollini, Ben Peterson, Raigan Novotny and Emily Shrift did.

A legacy is senior Charlie Glenny and Miranda Stieglitz winning Winterfest king and queen.

A legacy is Cheyenne Scott winning Poetry Out Loud as a sophomore.

A legacy is Hudson Elowsky, Sarah Moon, Beth Veenstra, Oliver Deyoung, Noah Carson, Isabel Hess making their mark in NHS.

A legacy is freshmen Benjamin Lentz and Blaise Snabes, along with seniors Luke Buday and David Ritter, and student teacher Ms. Rogers, and teacher Mr. Doug Drenth participating in a dodge ball tournament at lunch.

A legacy the junior class winning the lip syncs again.

A legacy is the entire student body raising $3,000 to help 8th grader Moses Jakubowski go to a camp.

A legacy is the boy's soccer winning regional champs for the first time.

A legacy is having the food trucks like Pigs Eatn' Ribs, and The Landings on the first day of school.

A legacy is Elise Stuck making All-State in basketball her freshman year.

A legacy is leaving our backpacks behind - in the lockers.

A legacy is Kevin Archambult and Lukila Witthoeft winning homecoming king and queen.

A legacy is having prom at the Castle.

The legacy is what you leave behind.

sliding into the first day

by Lukila Witthoeft

The night before the first day of school, teachers noticed how hot the next day was going to be. As a joke it was brought up that there should be a slip'n slide. Hours later there it was at the school. A big tarp was laid out, along with the Charlevoix township fire trucks supplying the water.

"I've always liked slip'n slides but this one was even cooler because it was huge and tons of fun," senior Luke Buday said.

The announcement wasn't made until last minute so only some kids came prepared to get wet but a lot of kids still used it.

"How could you refuse a giant slip'n slide?!" senior Lydia Balyo said.

Students rotated through the slip'n slide, obstacle course, soccer, giant volleyball, softball, and local food trucks.

"Everything was popping on the first day," junior Daniel Nesburg said.

Another thing about the first day that was unique for Charlevoix were the food trucks that came. Pigs Eatin' Ribs, The Landing, Pita Crusiser, and Cheese & Co all served food throughout the day.

"It was by far the best first day that I've had here, I loved the food trucks and all the other fun activities," Buday said.

All the events that occurred were planned by the student council. The council started planning during the summer with their advisor's Mrs. Jenny Glass and Mrs. Kristine Burmeister.

"The trickiest part about planning the first day of school was figuring out the logistics of how it was all going to flow. It's hard to plan lots of activities and figure out how to get 500 kids through them all," Glass said.

Each activity had enough time and the day went smoothly.

"There's nothing better than seeing kids having fun and creating memories in school," Glass said.

"I'm very competitive," Lentz said.

a season to relive

by Margaret Drost

The homecoming games were a success with the seniors coming in 1st place. They fought for their grade and with the practice over the four years of doing it, they have improved since their freshmen year. The stats overall were: 4th place- sophomores, 3rd place- freshmen, 2nd place- juniors, and 1st place- seniors. "We practice frequently," junior Camden Musilek said

The float stats showed that the sophomores came in the lead with the freshmen and seniors tied right behind them and the juniors in last. The juniors have came in last every year they've been competing.

"We're focused in on the lip syncs, undefeated streak," junior Jacob Petrosky said.

The games in the gym were intense with "Four Way Volleyball" and "Capture the Football." The juniors came in first, the sophomores came in 2nd, the seniors came in 3rd and the freshmen in last with 10 points.

The annual homecoming tug-a-war showed who was the strongest in the school and which grade had the most technique and who can work the best as a team. The seniors came in 1st and the freshmen came in second with the sophomores in 3rd and the juniors last.

Team Legacy

ONE. Showing school pride, freshman Megan Scholten and Grayce Sprecksell spray paint for their homecoming theme "Spring." "It was fun having the grade come together as a team to put together this the float," Scholten said.

TWO. While senior Lydia Balyo sets up lights for the pineapple umbrella, it completes the theme of "Summer" and the beach. "I wasn't able to be there the whole time, but I am happy at what I got done," Balyo said. THREE. When freshman Jacob Snyder puts up a football goal post, it almost completes the float. "It was fun to spray paint and and enjoy my first year building my float," Snyder said.

FOUR. Standing in the sand of the senior float senior Beth Veenstra tries to figure out where to put the anchor for the Red Devils gate, which is the main piece of the float. And, while doing so, she digs her toes into the sand. Veenstra also made sandcastles for the float. "It was a lot of fun coloring with Sharpies and digging in the sand," Veenstra said.

Putting finishing touches on one of the Christmas presents, junior Olivia Jeakle lends a helping hand to make a Christmas themed float for the juniors. TWO. As freshman Sean Bradley makes stems for the floor of the float, he gets help from freshman Seth Roeth. "It was a stressful time, but it was also fun. I am very happy to see everyone coming together for a common goal," Bradley said. THREE. Painting flowers for the freshmen "Spring Float," freshman Jake Conway has fun admiring the cardboard flowers as they dry. "The float in the end looked pretty cool," Conway said. FOUR. Digging in the sand, senior Lukila Witthoeft puts finishing touches on the float for Summer. "It was fun to get sand and put it on the float to create a beach scene," Witthoeft said. FIVE. Carefully gift wrapping junior Jacob Cox creates gifts for the sleigh. "I was helping out with the float for homecoming by wrapping Christmas presents for the float while my classmates built the sleigh," Cox said. SIX. Taking a break from float building, junior Colin Smith helps his grade out by helping to build Santa's sleigh. SEVEN. Putting up a dead Christmas tree he found in the woods, sophomore Carson Gauthier places the tree on the sophomores Fall float. "It made it look more spooky for halloween," Gauthier said.

Putting together the pieces of the float, freshmen Benjamin Lentz and Aidan Zahner use their drill skills to help build the front of the float.

freshmen bring the fire

by Margaret Drost

Freshman Benjamin Lentz was exited for his first year of float building. He said, "It was something other than a school activity, and it's something that only happened once a year."

A spring garden was the inspiration for the freshmen float. According to Lentz, it was student council who came up the idea.

"I liked the idea; it was really fun to make it a reality," Lentz said.

Lentz said tying with the seniors was a good because they had done float building for four years.

The senior float was a beach theme. In the float there were sand castles, hammocks and sand graves.

The sophomores had a Halloween themed float. They had gravestones of teams the varsity football players beat in football games!

The juniors had a Christmas float. It was decorated with Christmas trees, presents, bows and a naughty list including the opposing team played the night of the big game.

Although they had a great float it wasn't enough to beat the other grades.

"We didn't do it about winter, we just did it about Christmas," junior Kenzi Cunningham said.

Overall, the score from the float building was sophomores in 1st with seniors and freshmen tied for second and juniors once again in last place.

"We thought we would lose because we our float was cheezy," said freshman Micayle Vrondran.

The seniors led hardest every year with their creativity and detail however they never have came in first place.

"We think its rigged that we didn't win this year," senior Tyvin Whittaker said.

Sitting around a pool, seniors Kara Simpson, Kelsey Swanson, Isabel Hess and McKenna Ebert recite a movie scene from "Grown Ups." "This past homecoming we had a lot of students participate compared to the last year's, and it's great to see everyone be involved. We had a malfunction with the music, but it only makes our grade want to try harder for Winterfest," senior Isabel Hess said.

ONE. Extending his hand, junior Colin Smith dances with Kenzi Cunningham to "Mistletoe" by Justin Bieber. Smith said, "It's all about being simple, yet eloquent." TWO. Portraying a scene from "Pocahontas," sophomores Peter Morgridge and Isabella Witthoeft glide across the stage. Witthoeft said, "It was so fun to do a cute dance with Robby." THREE. Acting out a scene from "Phineas and Ferb," seniors Miranda Stieglitz, Bradley Klinger and Kevin Pearl get into character. Stieglitz said, "I felt very confident in my role as Candace, until our audio was changed!"

lip sync legacy

Dancing in a line, freshman participants perform a dance to "It's Rainin' Men." "For being our first one we did well," freshman Abigail Cunningham said said.

by Kenzi Cunningham

The lip sync competition is arguably the most competitive, and combative contest throughout the homecoming festivities. quote.

The freshman had a standout performance for their first ever lip sync earning themselves second place. The lip sync featured dances to songs such as, 'It's Raining Men,' 'Singin' in the Rain,' 'Purple Rain,' and 'Pocket Full of Sunshine. Freshman Ben Letz said, "It made our grade feel accomplished that we were able to get second place in our first lip sync."

The sophomores ended up in a close last place, featuring a scene from, 'Peanut,' and 'The Great Pumpkin' as well as songs 'Thriller.' "I thought the show was fan-tabulous, and quite entertaining seeing different talents from different students," Sean Nalevayko sophomore.

The junior class managed to keep up their winning streak, earning their forth first place finish. Their skit featured songs from 'High School Musical,' 'Justin Bieber,' 'Mean Girls,' and 'Polar Express.' "It was exceptional how we managed to assert our dominance and stay 4-0," junior Jacob Petrosky said.

The seniors landed themselves third place which may have been due to an audio mix up. Their performance included scenes from "Grown Ups," "Phineas and Ferb," and "High School Musical." Senior Allex Smith said, "Our wrong audio was played, and we were very devastated, because this was last lip sync and they should have allowed us to redo it."

1st place: Juniors, Winter; "Getting a 4 peat isn't hard when you got Troy and Gabriella up there." Joshua Carlson

2nd place: Freshmen, Spring; "I think freshman should have won, because our lip sync was the bomb." -Margaret Drost

3rd place: Senior, Summer; "I was dancing my heart out". -Malcom Williams

4th place: Sophomore, Fall;"The "Thriller" dance was really fun, because we got to paint our shirts, and it looked cool once it was all put together". -Ellie Louiselle

ONE. Cheering for the football team are sophomores Ellie Louiselle and Payton Novotny. "I painted my face because the entire volleyball team did for our float to get more in spirit," Louiselle said. TWO. Marching with his trumpet, freshman Gavriel LaCroix goes into his fourth year of playing. "I really like getting to be a part of the games and being there for the crowning of winterfest king and queen," LaCroix said. THREE. Flashing phone lights for a rendition of "Hotel California," students rock out with the "Three Amigos"- teacher Peter Scholten and seniors Hudson Elowsky and Christian Matye. FOUR. After practicing to play "Jingle Bells" with tubing, the teachers at Charleoix Middle/High School preform in front of the school. "I was really concerned with the heads of the others. It was hard not knowing what they were feeling. And knowing that if you messed up, someone was going to mess up right after you was really fun. My main concern was of the others, but it was a fun experience," teacher Kristine Burmister said. FIVE. Cheering on the football team, the Rayder cheer team lines up along the sidelines. "I loved being on the team. It was awesome to be a part of a group that looked out for each other, loved what we did and had an amazing coach to guide us. It was an awesome group of girls, and we joined as a team. Team players was what I liked, and coach Sonia Dorst kept us together," freshman Riley Russell said. SIX. Supporting fellow Rayder junior Rachel Nesburg, senior Lukila Witthoeft holds a cutout of Nesburg's face. "I thought it was really funny and felt awesome because usually the student section is not very hype at our games," Nesburg said. SEVEN. Cheering on the Rayder basketball team, students pile into the student section. "I love how everyone comes together and just extrudes spirit," freshman Tyler Ostrum said.

School spirit comes in many different forms and shapes. From attending sporting events to dressing up for spirit week. The students at Charlevoix have no problem expressing their pride for their school. School sporting events are a great way for students to go out and show their pride and spirit for their school.

"I love participating in our Rayder Cheer at assemblies to see which grade can do it the loudest. I always try to yell as loud as I can and give it my all," sophomore Angelina Hudson said.

The stands packed full of students in beach gear or halls packed with students in Rayder gear. The students at CHS have no problem showing their school spirit.

"I feel like it's important to have diversity in your school. Charlevoix's school spirit overall is very strong. From sports game student sections to homecoming spirit week, their unique ideas give Charlevoix a good name when it comes to creativity. I love our school spirit," junior Aaliah Pearsall said.

ONE. Using all their muscles pulling the rope from the team on the opposite side, juniors Grace Way, Raigan Novotny, Abigail Noirot and Camden Musilek try to win tug of war. "The is always challenging, you have to pull the rope and at the same time make sure your feet won't slide too much," Abigail Noirot said. The juniors lost with 4th place. TWO. Jumping in the air to get the ball in the net, senior Beth Veenstra plays lighting for the winterfest Fridays games. "I was enjoying playing lighting. I play basketball, so I found it easier to play than any of the other games. My technique was to remember the things I have learned from practice about shooting to get the ball in the net," Veenstra said. Veenstra made it halfway through the game before she lost. THREE. Enjoying their lunch are freshmen Gavriel LaCroix and Giovanni Ferucci. "We enjoyed dressing up for winterfest," LaCroix said. FOUR. Building the castle for 'castleball,' freshmen Anthony Illenden and Cole Wright work together. "When I was told I was going to play I was so excited!" Wright said. "It's so fun to get to get to play with my classmates. We all get to work together," Illenden said. FIVE. Football spirit was shining all over senior Sarah Moon. "I was wearing my brother's football jacket and had stripes painted on my face to match the seniors jocks them," Moon said. SIX. Playing ping-pong freshman Seth Roeth hits the ball trying to win the title as the best high school ping-pong player. "I like playing ping- pong because for me it's like an adrenaline rush running around hitting the ball," Roeth said. Roeth lost his game against freshman Benjamin Lentz.

Freshman Abigail Cunningham dresses up as a unicorn during her Spanish class, "During spirit week it's fun to put the crazy clothes on your mom buys you that you normally wouldn't wear," Cunningham said.

Freshmen Jake Conway and Corinne Meicher wearing their matching hippie outfits. "We both enjoy being dressed up for the freshman's theme for a whole day," Conway said.

"I went online and searched for images of Kimmy Gibbler from the show "Full House" and went off with something that she would wear," senior Kelsey Swanson as she dressed up for the 80s Winterfest theme.

be unique

As a freshman, sophomore or junior you might forget to value some of the great things that you get to do during your Winterfest Week.

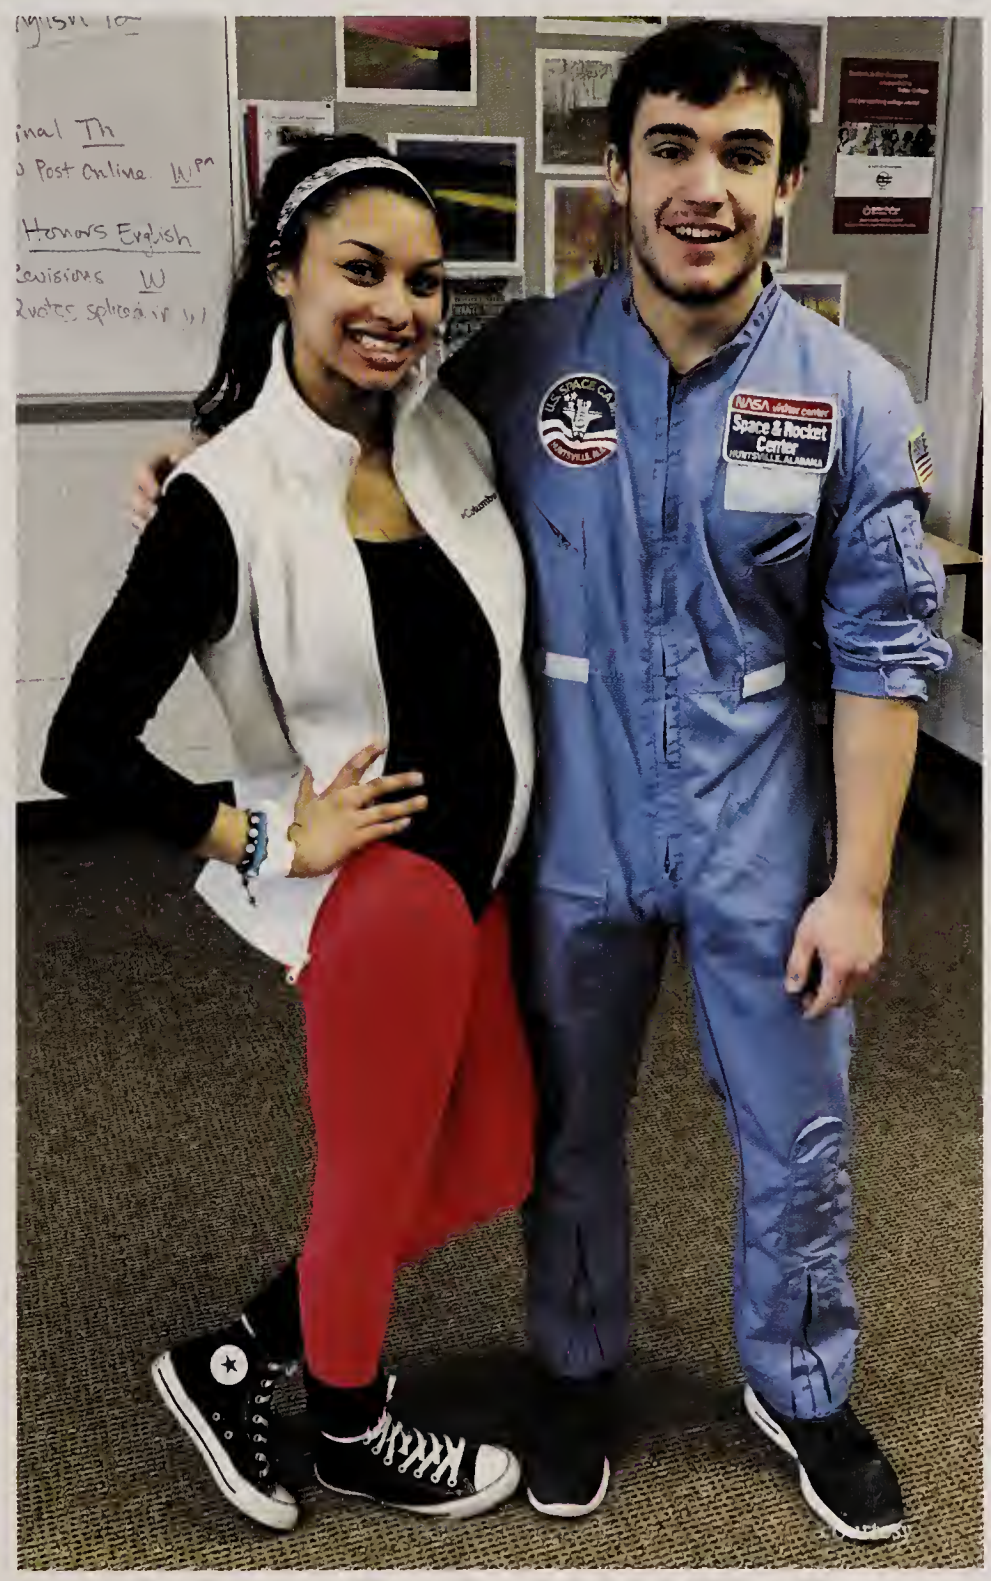
"Younger students should definitely remember how unique the activities are and how easy it is to participate, they might not ever get to do that again once they are in college," senior Tyvin Whittaker said.

One of the features of homecoming and winterfest is the lip sync. It's an opportunity for students to get closer with their classmates and spend time planning and practicing together.

"I like that you get to incorporate things that you personally want to do into the lip sync, at the same time you also get closer with all your classmates during your practice before the actual lip sync has to be presented," Whittaker said.

Some grades choose to give goofy costumes or stage stunts to improve their performance.

"Kevin shaved his whole head just for the lip sync; something my friends and I will probably look back at and laugh about," Whittaker said.



Side by side, seniors Tyvin Whittaker and Mikaya Dixon dress up for Winterfest's 80s spirit day. "I got my suit from a family member and thought 80s day was a great opportunity to wear it," Whittaker said.

the enchanted coronation

The evening was brought to an end with the royal crowning of the 2017 prom king and queen.

Queen Isabelle Buday in her shiny silver dress and her beautiful tiara shine bright with the honor of being chosen for the honor.

"I was surprised, but it wasn't the best thing because I don't like a lot of attention," Buday said. King Luke Telganhof stands straight with the queen by his side and a smirk on his face. "I was really happy and surprised that I won," Telgenhof said.

Buday and Telgenhof were randomly drawn. Students put their votes in a "hat" and their names were drawn.

"The food was fantastic and I loved seeing everyone being themselves and dancing," Paczesny said. TWO. Lighting their Chinese lantern, senior Cameron Clark, and juniors Joshua Carlson and Philip Conway work together to set free their floating light. "My favorite part was dressing up and taking pictures with Emmaline," Carslon said. THREE. FLipping bottles, juniors Lauren House, Samantha Chowen, Alexandria Snabes and Julia Sape pass the time with a little extra fun. "My favorite part was the chocolate fountain," House said. FOUR. Smiling at the fact that it's his senior prom, senior Christopher Gregory Poses with his arm around his date sophomore Madison O'Leary. "It was a lot better than last year," Gregory said. FIVE. Chowing on some dessert, seniors Nicholas Bradley and John Donker start off their night with some of the food. "My favorite food there was the cotton candy," Donker said. SIX. Twinning in their blue dresses, senior Lauren Pitcher and junior Abagail Glazier smile big and dance the night away. "I liked the cupid shuffle," Pitcher said. SEVEN. Coming in to the prom in their nice suits, senior Joshua Beaubien and sophomore Markus Thomas have their grand entrance. "My favorite part was the music and going with my girlfriend," Thomas said.

an enchanted evening

by Margaret Drost

The 2017 prom theme was Enchanted Evening. It was a magical night at the Castle Farms which featured floating lanterns, complimentary t-shirts a rocking DJ and so much more.

"My favorite part of prom was the chocolate fountain," junior Abbey Scholten said.

The night was filled with funky tuxes and beautiful dresses. Seniors Kevin Archambault and Jayden Bergmann wore red, white and blue suits to their last prom.

"We wanted to stand out because we can," senior Kevin Archambault said.

The Castle Farms crashed the night by not letting the students let go of the chinese lanterns.

"It was nice for a little bit to be outside because it was so hot inside," said senior Lea Holst.

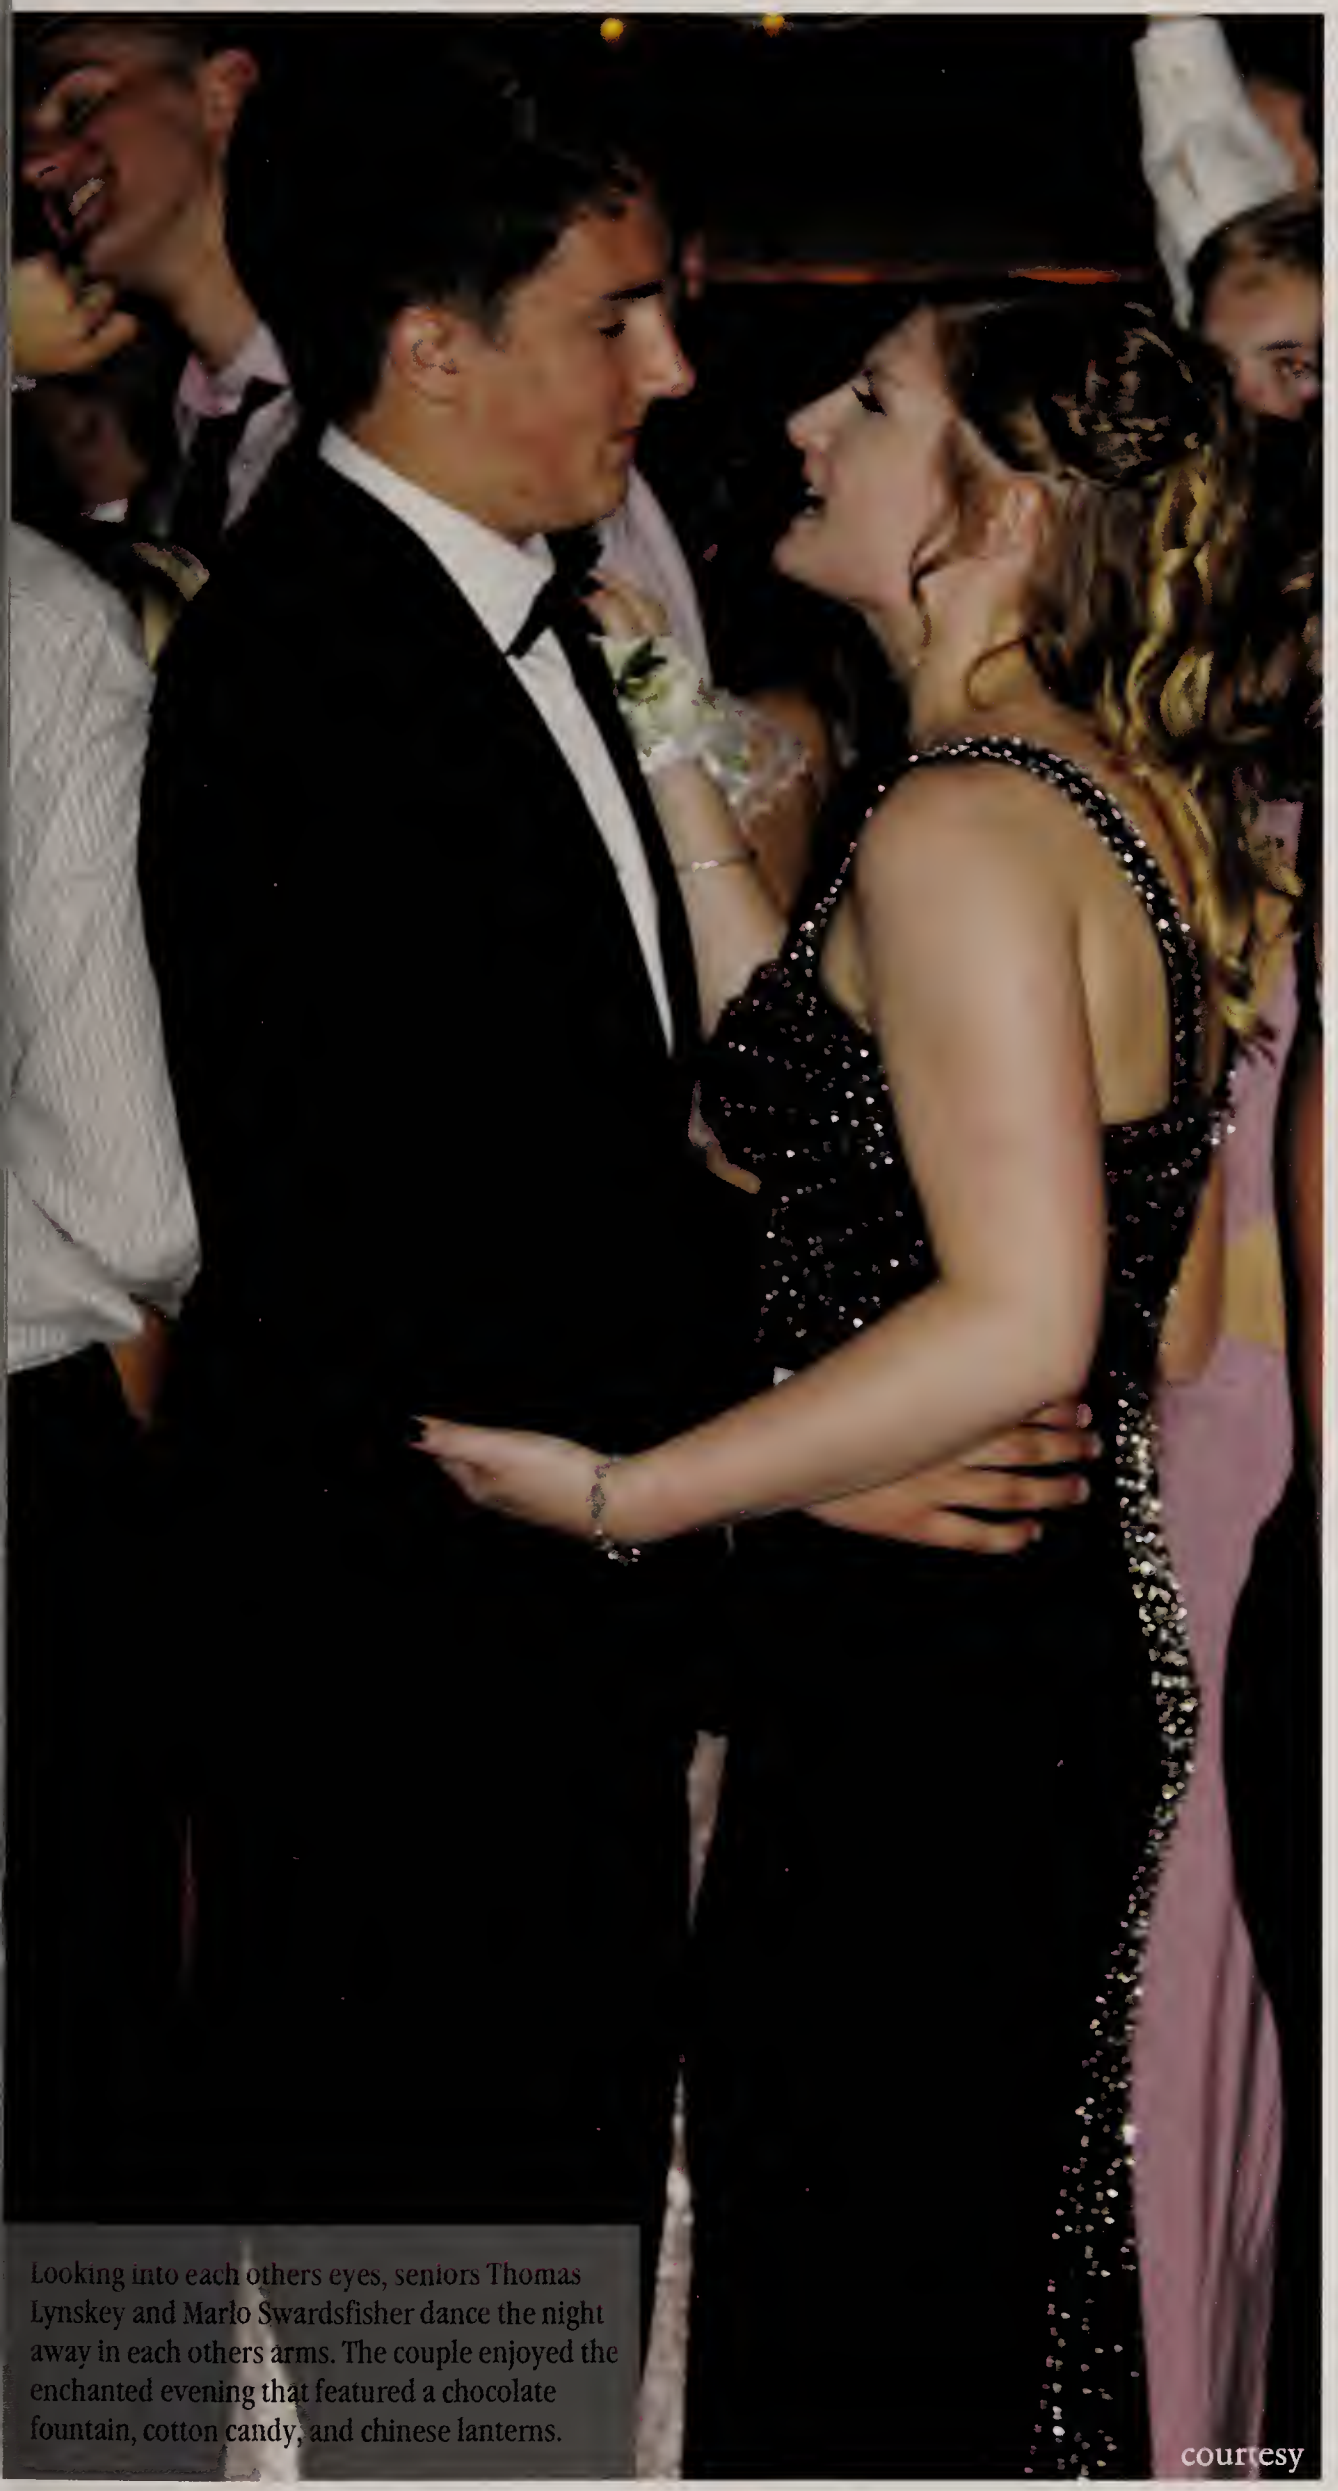
Some of the students were bottle flipping water bottles to pass the free time.

"It was better than the music that was being played," senior Tyvin Whittaker said.

In the end the night was an amazing time, and it was one to remember.

"The music wasn't particularly good this year, but the chocolate fountain made up for it," senior Allex Smith said.

"I still got to dance with my girlfriend," senior Tyvin Whittaker said.



Looking into each others eyes, seniors Thomas Lynskey and Marlo Swardsfisher dance the night away in each others arms. The couple enjoyed the enchanted evening that featured a chocolate fountain, cotton candy, and chinese lanterns.

popular vote controversy

Hillary Clinton, despite losing the election and the electoral college vote, managed to win the popular vote, the participation trophy of U.S politics. This has been the rallying point for many crushed Clinton supporters, spawning a Change.Org petition advocating for the electoral college to flip votes against Trump post-election, garnering millions of signatures.

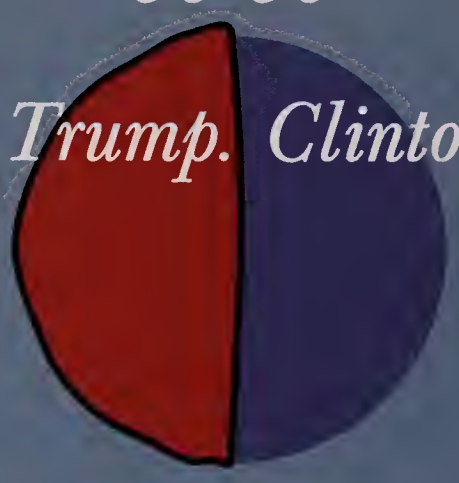
Why she lost

Trading ideas, juniors Benjàmin Peterson and Kenzi Cunningham discuss the election. " I really think we should move to a popular vote system, where the people decide who they want, not the electoral college," Peterson said. "I'm a big fan of the popular vote," junior Kenzi Cunningham.

student elections

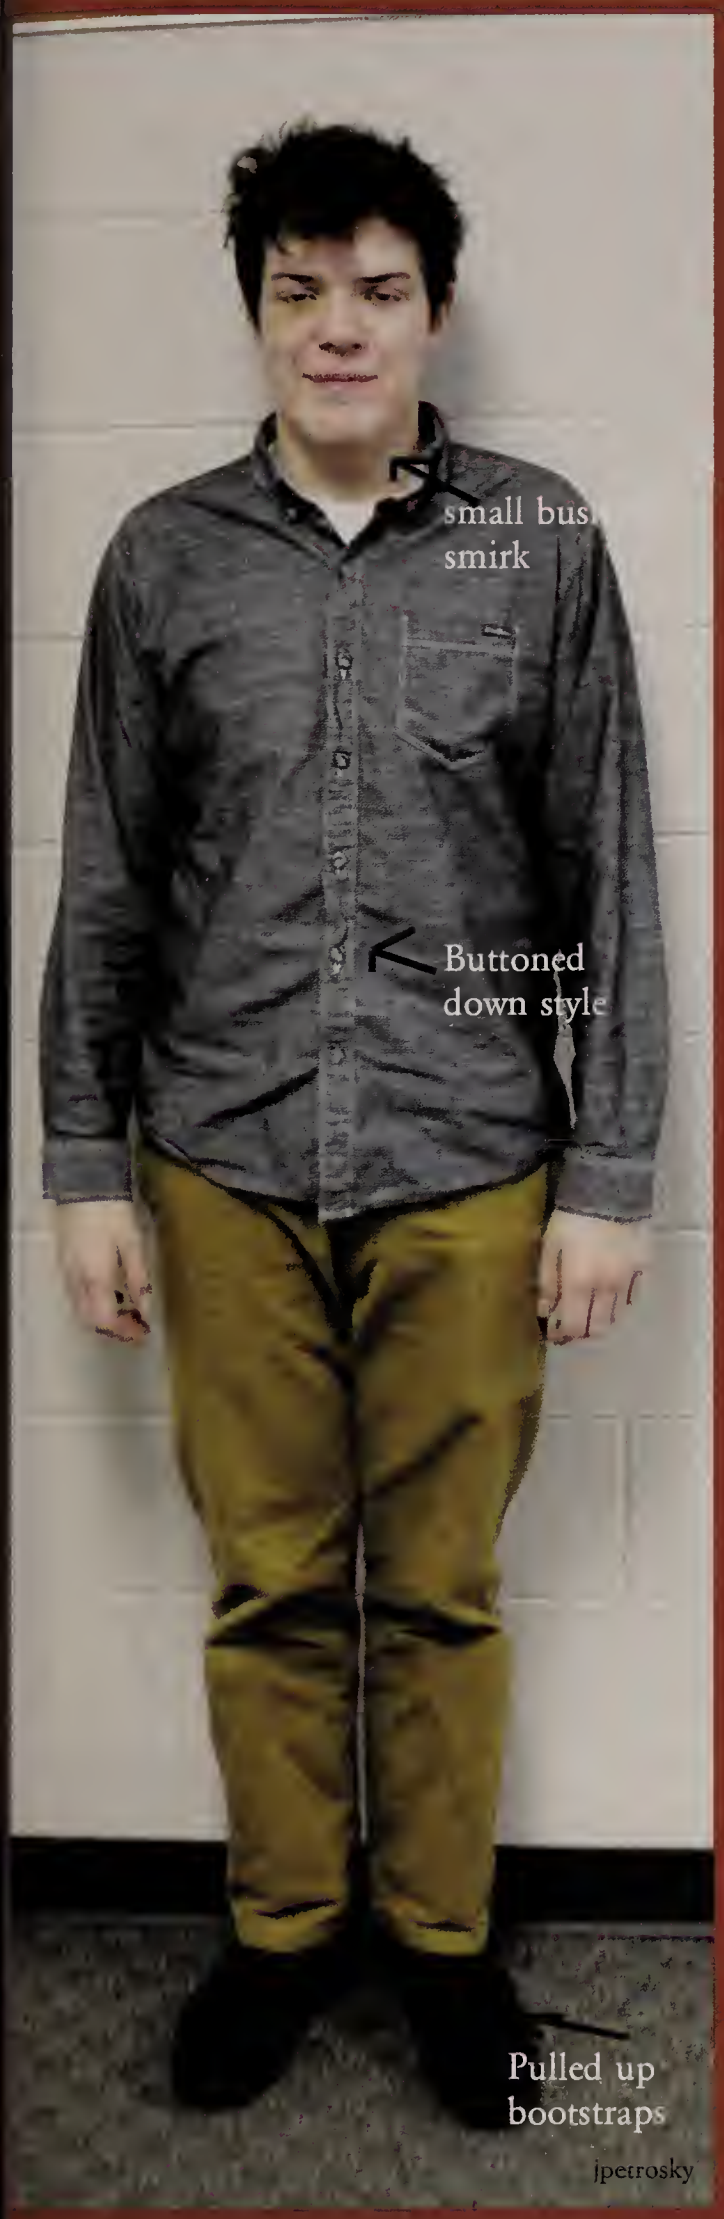
The student Edmodo poll came to a dead heat, with both Donald J. Trump and Hillary Clinton coming in at 50 percent. " I liked Hillary for the win. The 50/50 split was crazy," junior Abbey Scholten said. "It was nuts," freshmen Emma Buday said.

School Vote: 50-50



A firm leftist, junior Grace Ochs postures. " I just really feel like Trump is not the man I want leading our country," Ochs said. Ochs spoke of her affinity for Hillary Rodham Clinton, albeit having some disappointment over "I'm with Her," calling it a "weak slogan." "I'm rolling down the Hills, sounds better," Ochs said. " I feel like Hillary's experience in government as a senator for New York and Secretary of State really qualifies her for the position of President," Ochs said.

team trump



A strong conservative, sophomore Maximus Hinkle stands ardently in support of Middle America. " I've always leaned right, and while I think the wall won't happen, I definitely prefer him to Hillary," Hinkle said. " Hillary was just shady," Hinkle said.

Favorite Trump Tweet

"We will bring back our jobs. We will bring back our wealth - and we will bring back our dreams."
-Jake Conway

"We had a great News Conference a Trump Tower today. A couple of FAKE NEWS organizations were there but the people truly get what's going on."
-Tyvin J Whittaker

"I have never seen a thin person drinking Diet Coke."
-Jacob Petrosky

"Windmills are the greatest threat in the US to both bald and golden eagles. Media claims fictional 'global warming' is worse."
-Susan Dong

Donning patrotic garb, sophomore Ana Smith smiles. "My family has traditionally been conservative, and I agree. I'm excited to "Drain the Swamp," Smith said. "He's the man we need right now," Smith said.

Smith said she has experienced bullying from non-Trump supporters and was scared to share her testimony. Smith has helped with Republican campaigns in the past at a local level, and said it was a "fun experience, being involved at the grassroots level."
Smith has enjoyed the "Apprentice" in the past, but said it " fell off" since Trump left.

still feelin' the "Bern"

A hardcore Berner, freshman Elisabeth Petrosky speaks on student council. " I really liked the idea of getting free college then having him hopefully be out in time for me not have to pay for it," Petrosky said. " I think he was a great option for this country and a progressive leader," senior Kelsey Swanson said.

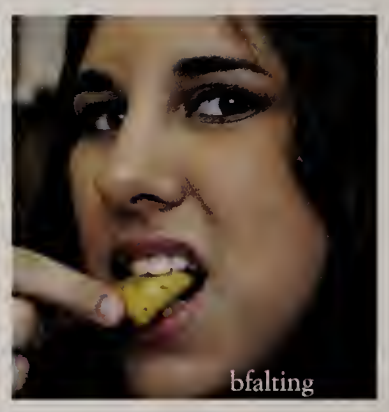
"Probably buying my car because it's my source of transportation," senior Danielle Prate said.



"Any equipment that helps me improve my performance in golf is the best thing that I have ever bought," senior Emily Sabssok said.

Queen of trends - Miranda Stieglitz

Smiling at the fact that she is the queen of trends, senior Miranda Stieglitz, appreciates the idea of being looked up to for fashion advice. "It is a true confidence boost to know that some think I have the best taste in clothing. I have a lot of expensive clothing because my mom works at a clothing store. One time I got a cashmere sweater from her store for around $100 but she does get a discount off that. I wouldn't say I have an inspiration I just do me and the articles of clothing that fit me well and colors that compliment me. With my mom working in fashion and designs, thats the reason I try to wear nice things rather than a t-shirt," Miranda Stieglitz said.

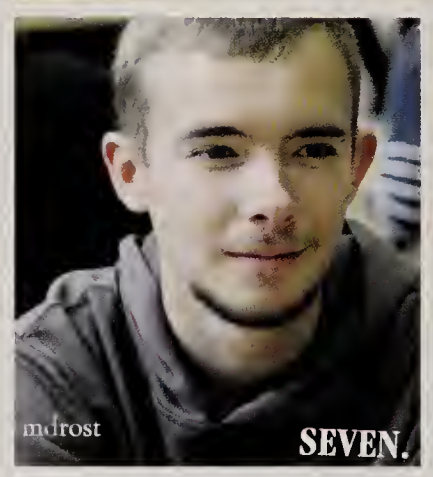
ONE. Laughing at each other's jokes, sophomores Annabelle Leigh and Aysia Hoffman eat their lunch in the front of the school "It's a fun spot to hang out," Hoffman said. TWO. Carrying his chair to his table, sophomore Tylan Fry makes his way to eat his lunch. THREE. Snacking on pudding, senior Malcom Williams enjoys lunch. FOUR. Doing some intensive tooting, junior Renee Johnson sits in the band room. "I'm very passionate about band," Johnson said. FIVE. With focus, freshmen Helen Hanchin plays the flute. SIX. Jamming out, junior Wesley Loper feels the beats. " I listen to music and talk at lunch because I like both," Loper said. SEVEN. Flashing a smarmy grin, senior Kevin Edick sits at his table. " That man can eat chicken nuggets with the best of them," senior Paxton Julier said. EIGHT. Studying her phone, freshmen Margaret Drost uses up her lunchtime. "I'm kind of a big deal so I have to keep updated on what's happening on Snapchat," Drost said.



Helping Hand at Lunch

Senior Destiny Wilks wraps up all four years of high school lunch describing "freshmen year everyone talked a lot more than senior year, senior year everybody just eats and does their own thing."

While talking with Wilks she had to make sure everyone knows that Lori the lunch lady was her best friend and a great person to cook with. Wilks has worked in the kitchen for the second half of her senior year helping make french fries and cleaning up the salad bar.

Along with Wilks, senioe Kristi Wojan also worked in the kitchen for the second half of the year. They both agreed that they did the right thing.

"Lori, along with all the other people who work in the kitchen, work really hard and are appreciated and respected by the students," Wilks said.

Taking a crisp bite, junior Savhana Mccullough enjoys lunch with friends. "It's fun to sit down with your pals at lunch," Mccullough said. " I like it as a place to socialize during the day," junior Kenzi Cunningham said.

its not just a "lunch room"

by Sydney Martin

Charlevoix lunch room is not just a lunch room. It's a place where students get the chance to see their friends, eat food and get a little break in the day to clear their heads before they go onto the second half of the day.

Students spend their time in various ways, such as looking at their phone, doing homework, studying, or practicing their instrument.

While there are opposing views on the lunch the school serves, many students seem to enjoy it.

Junior Daniel Symons said "It's the highlight of my day and pretty tasty."

At least once a month the broadcasting class presents their latest works. Rayder TV, highlights sports, student activities, random clips and more. With activities such as the lip sync being advertised to the student body, participation rises.

"I really appreciate the time I get to sit down with my friends, have a good meal, and watch Rayder TV every other Friday," sophomore Markus Thomas said. "I also got to learn about the lip sync, something I never would have been aware of before," Thomas said.

During Winterfest, a ping-pong tournament took place during lunch between grades. For the spring event a dodgeball tournament takes place.

"I was pretty pumped to be the ultimate ping-pong champion," senior Christian Matye said.

smiles down the red carpet

by Abbey Scholten

Senior Isabelle Buday said it wasn't much of a surprise getting chosen by Mrs. Annemarie Conway as a People's Choice nominee, "because we have a great relationship. I have had her as a teacher since freshman year taking U.S. history, AP government, sociology, and Psychology. I also am in a club she lead which is MUN."

"She is one of my favorite teachers so her speech she said about me was very meaningful to me," Buday said.

The red carpet was laid out for students at the People's Choice awards. Overall there were 42 students nominated by staff and teachers.

Isabelle was amazed by the ceremony presentation. Her favorite part was the limo ride because it was her first time ever in one.

Stepping out on to the red carpet is senior Isabelle Buday. Buday was nominated by teacher Annemarie Conway. She said of Buday, "I knew Izzy as a very shy freshman. In her junior year she pushed herself to join MUN and had a great time debating with people she didn't know and speaking before a crowd. I love that she grew confident with her abilities."

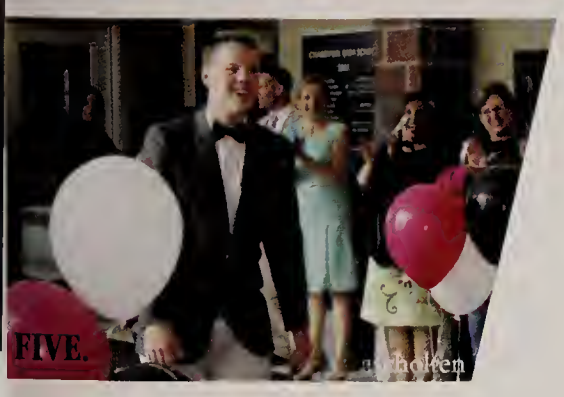
Students leaving a legacy of accomplishments

Sophia Sheets was chosen by Principal Mrs. Klinger. She unfortunately didn't get the surprise like everyone else because she was the last one to be chosen. Sophia was proud to have her little brother George supporting her during this event. Sophia loved the limo ride to the red carpet. She said, "it made the event special."

Klinger said she chose Sheets because, " I chose Sophia because I enjoyed watching her persevere, self-reflect, have a positive attitude and take positive action at school. She was a tremendous leader in broadcasting where her creativity shined brightly."



ONE. Smiling while being applaud down the red carpet sophomore Jason Mueller was chosen for People's Choice award by Mr. Bryan Hawkins. "I was shocked that I was chosen by him, but his speech made me very happy. I appreciate all the kind words he said about me. He encouraged me to play basketball, and I have loved the sport ever since," Mueller said. When asking Mueller about the experience of this event he said, "my favorite part was walking down the red carpet. It was truly awesome." TWO. Tyvin Whittacker receives his trophy from one of his favorite teachers since freshman year, Mrs.Kirstie Swanson. Tyvin said, "I knew exactly who chose me because Mrs. Swanson and I are very close and have a great relationship. I also was happy to be her teachers aide grading tests and printing formative assignments for her." THREE. Carson Whitley (Left) and Hayden Dvoracek(Right) pose with their trophies they earned during the ceremony. Whitley was chosen for People's choice by Mr. Mike Washburn because, "of the way he has matured and grown throughout the years I've known him." Carson said, "my favorite part was the speech because Mr. Washburn shared many memories and made me very happy." Dvoracek was chosen by his construction teacher Mr. Norman Carlson. Hayden said his favorite part was the reception because of the delicious deserts and trying to figure out who picked you throughout the ceremony." FOUR. Draven Shorty was honored to be chosen by Mr. Foster. While walking off the stage he said, "this ceremony made me feel like a president walking down the red carpet and important. The ceremony made me very proud of myself and made me feel like I achieved something very honorable." FIVE. Caeden Collins dressed classy and proudly smiling walks the red carpet. Collins said that, " it was different for me to have all attention on me while walking with honor down the red carpet. My favorite part was getting to know each candidate while hearing the speech said about them. The speeches were all very heart felt and special." SIX. Walking off the stage after claiming her trophy freshman Taylor Zoerner was chosen by Mrs. Lori Brown, the school cook.Brown picked Zoerner because, "she always has a smile on her face and is very mature. She's a very polite student who always says thank you for the meals we make her for lunch everyday." Zoerner said, "the speech was very meaningful to her and appreciated all the kind words Mrs. Brown had said about me."

ONE. Beyoncé poses for her public pregnancy announcement. On February 1, 2017, the singer-songwriter made it known that she, her husband Jay Z, and daughter Blue Ivy were expecting not just one, but two new family members as she is pregnant with twins. On instagram, she received over 10 million likes on the news. "I found out seconds after she posted it on instagram, Beyoncé is my inspiration, and I was immediately filled with excitement and joy," senior Allex Smith said, "She is a great role model to women and is someone we can relate to because she is so open." TWO. United States Olympian Simone Biles leaps gracefully during a balance beam routine, receiving a nearly perfect score. Biles was the 2016 Olympic individual all-around, vault and floor gold medalist. She was part of the gold medal-winning team dubbed the "Final Five" at the 2016 Summer Olympics in Rio de Janeiro. She was considered the greatest female gymnast to ever live at only 19 years old. THREE. Engaged in the newest global obsession, people all over the world can explore and catch Pokemon and more in a GPS generated game called Pokemon Go. "I like how it gives me opportunities to walk around and discover new places and playing with my friends is a lot of fun too," senior Kelsey Swanson said. "You can't really play it when its super cold out, but I look forward to summer to get out and play it again." FOUR. A Samsung Galaxy Note 7 cell phone is damaged by a recent outbreak of technical difficulty within the company. The new product quickly became a new danger to consumers, as they were allegedly catching fire and even "exploding" in their care. "I think that this sort of thing happens with a lot of new outputs," senior Marlo Schwartzfisher said. "Accidents happen, I'm sure they will overcome this setback and continue to make good products."

ONE. Donald Trump, a candidate in the 2016 presidential election comes to power as the next commander-in-chief. On Jan, 20, 2017 Trump was swarn into office and given the new role. This election had been named one of the biggest in election history, and has rooted a lot of controversy in America at the same time. "This election was huge because it was between a big business man and a candidate for possibly the first female president in history, Hillary Clinton," senior Cloe Winnie said.

TWO. Hundreds of men and women stand on the capital to send a message to the new executive. The day following the presidential inauguration, a "March on Washington" was held promoting women's rights. Several other marches were held on this day all over the country, including about 3,000 present in Traverse City. "I went to the march in Traverse City. It was really cool to see our society take part in such a huge event in history," senior Becca Moon said.

THREE. Members of the Flint community come together to stand for their rights to clean water. According to a class-action lawsuit, the state Department of Environmental Quality was not treating the Flint River, the main water source for the city, with an anti-corrosive agent, in violation of federal law. This resulted the city with contaminated tap water that raised major health concerns in the city. "It makes me distrust city tap water, and I always have a second thought when going to drink city water," senior Tyvin Whi ttaker said.

IOUR. The land parched for water, the state of California suffers a great drought in 2016. "The combination of exceptional dryness and record warmth have acted in combination to produce the most severe drought conditions experienced in California in living memory (and very probably over a century)," Daniel Swain from Weather West said.

FIVE. Prince performs dressed in all purple to one of his many large audiences. The American singer-songwriter died in April of 2016, leaving a great legacy behind him. he had many successful titles, including songs such as "Purple Rain" and "1999.""My first party in eighth grade we watched Purple Rain. Prince has been a large influence in my time," Mrs. Karen Peterson.

ONE. Side by side, senior friends Lydia Balyo and Cloe Winnie walk to take their seats. Winnie will be attending Ferris State Univeristy to become a dental hygienist. She was the Hagen Scholarship recipient, which is worth roughly $40,000. TWO. Strutting to the stage, seniors Elliott Bartelli and Graham Kroon prepare to graduate. Kroon will be attending NMU, while Bartelli plans to join the workforce as a mechanic. THREE. Walking to their seats, seniors Mikayla Martinchek and Kasey Reed get ready to graduate. Martinchek plans on attending Northwestern Michigan College. FOUR. Fly as a bird, senior Lauren Pitcher enjoys her last moments. Pitcher plans to attend Central Michigan University where she will continue her musical ambitions with the band. FIVE. Walking out of school together for the last time, senior twins Luke and Isabelle Buday leave the gym. Izzy plans on attending Grand Valley University; Luke plans on attending Lansing Community College and running on their cross country and track teams. SIX. Arm in arm, seniors Jacob Bondie and Chelsie Jones enjoy the moment. Both will be attending Northern Michigan University in the fall SEVEN. Heading out of the gym for the last time, seniors Alison Jarema and Cameron Clark are newly graduated. "I'm going to study biomedical sciences and specifically genetics to get into genetic counseling. I'm really going to miss the sense of community at the school and being with everyone who I've grown up with everyday," Jarema said.

Giving an updated "ABC" lesson is senior Hudson Elowsky. Elowsky was chosen to speak to class of 2017 through application. He included tidbits from the students 12 years of school together.

skitzo has spoken

by Benjamin Peterson

Hudson Elowsky is normally known as the funny man on campus. He's known by numerous names: Skitzo, Worm, Rat. But on graduation Sunday, he was known as Hudson.

His speech captivated the audience due to his humor and bringing back memories of middle school health class.

Elowsky gave 26 different memories from the classes 12 years together, one memory for every letter of the alphabet.

"I was really proud and honored to be selected out of all the really smart kids in our grade who spent a lot of time on their speeches; to make the speech I wanted to give my class something funny and memorable. And, I also wanted all kinds of kids to be included," Elowsky said. Elowsky will be attending Michigan State University in the fall.

The speaker after Hudson was Mr. Garrett, who has never not been in a school without this grade since he was hired back in 2011. Garrett pointed out that he wouldn't be where he was without the class of 2017, and he will miss them dearly.

The class of 2017 will be missed, but they will have great success outside of high school.

"They are my friends and colleagues, and they are the future of the greatest nation on earth. God bless every one of us, thank you to all the teachers, coaches and adults that helped us succeed these very important years of our lives, and congratulations to the graduating Charlevoix High School class of 2017," Garrett said.

ONE. Answering the safety questions, junior Jakob Simmons uses his MacBook to take a test for Construction class. Some of the questions include what kind of tool safety and environmental precautions he should use. TWO. While looking at what is on the board in Mrs. Erskine's class, senior Miranda Stieglitz listens while writing notes."Even though we do take a lot of notes, I still enjoy the class," Stieglitz said."If there was anything I would change about Marketing it would be all the notes we take," Stieglitz said. THREE. As three amigos, seniors Christian Matye and Hudson Elowsky sing along with teacher Mr. Peter Scholten. "We just enjoy doing what we do best," Matye said. FOUR. Side by side, Mr. Curt Harwood helps out junior Courtney Streeter. "I like the class because everything is independent by doing IXL," Streeter said. FIVE. Examining cells under the microscope, freshmen Sean Bradley and Helen Hanchin work on a biology experiment together. "This experiment is something that I enjoyed doing, and thought it wa pretty fun. I am trying to adjust the lens to see the cells better in the leaf," Bradley said. SIX. As juniors Emily Scott and Della Burnett work on their IXL, they smile and laugh at one another. In integrated math they were working on something new and were able to go at their own pace. " I like to be able to choose which subject to learn," Burnette said. SEVEN. Organizing wrapping paper, seniors Kara Simpson and McKenna Ebert work together at the Christmas Project. "It's a rewarding experience to help people in need in our community," Simpson said.

Interested in class, senior David Ritter looks at a challenging math question in class. Ritter hopes to be a computer engineer after high school.

Clubs & Academics

fun and friends

by Caleb Pittman

"This is something new to me, and I love new experiences," sophomore Shawn Nalevayko said.

"I found that hanging out with the Young Americans was a great experience almost like I was in a new family, and it's an experience I would recommend to anyone," Nalevayko said when asked about his favorite thing in the Young Americans.

"It was a very hot suit, but it was also very cool because I felt like I was Batman and that I was not Shawn but Shawn Wayne," Nalevayko said.

This all came from Shawn Nalevayko who participated in the Young Americans, a traveling group of people who came to the school and had a preference with students.

They performed music and taught the kids different languages, and they were also doing dances to other subjects like math. They also had a lesson on how everyone is equal and to respect others no matter what.

"Being Elsa was very cool, but also stressful because I had to do it by myself," sophomore, Julia Ivester said the player of the Elsa representing "Frozen" in the character mash up of characters from the TV shows and movies that defined this generation.

"Playing Shrek was super fun because I had to sing in a Scottish accent which was fun but weird because well I'm not Scottish," sophomore Caleb Pittman said.

Performing Bonnie Tyler's "I Need A Hero" as Batman, sophomore Shawn Nalevayko strikes a pos getting ready for a massive group shot with the rest of the characters representing the movies and the TV shows that shape this generation of kids. "I am growing too old for the Batman cape," Nalevayko said.

Standing above the field, senior Matthew Good observes the massive stadium, home to the Real Madrid soccer team in Madrid, Spain. "It was exciting to see the trophies, walk on the field and go into the locker room," Good said.

ONE. Preparing for takeoff, the students take the first step into their expedition. The beginning of the trip started with a bumpy flight. From Sault Saint Marie to Toronto, a small plane was taken. "It was a short ride first, maybe a half hour. The next flight was 6-8 hours. I got to watch movies, but I slept most of the way," senior Kelsey Swanson said. TWO. Waiting for their flight back home, the students nap in the airport. "We were on our way back home, and we were all exhausted," senior Ali Jarema said, "We had to get up super early to make sure we got through customs on time. Once the stressful part was over, we had some time to chill out before the plane. The result was napping after a lot of walking during the trip," Jarema said. The students found themselves tired enough to sleep on floors, in taxis, even in subways. THREE. Parque Maria Louisa was another stop in Sevilla for the students. On a bright and sunny morning, the students walked its petite bridges and posed for group pictures on its mosaic walls and benches. FOUR. The students visit Barcelona's Sagrada Familia. Vibrant with several stained glass windows and unique architecture, the Sagrada Familia was a must see for the group. FIVE. & SIX. Making new friends, seniors Jacob Mitchell and Christian Matye play with the pigeons found in Parque Maria Louisa in the city of Sevilla. For a small price, the students could buy small bags of bird seed to feed the birds. SEVEN. Enjoying a large slice of watermelon, senior Tyler Fuchs walks through the sunny Parque Guell. In the hot climate, it was important for the students to get lots of water. Fuchs found his own fun way to stay hydrated.

The students explored inner cities of Spain, which featured many great markets, selling loads of fruits, vegetables, and other local foods. This market was explored by the Spanish students in the old city of Madrid.

Senior Isabel Hess going down on a zip line with her GoPro. "It was a spontaneous idea, and it ended up being really fun. I liked watching my classmates go zip lining too," Hess said.

Walking up the steps, the students explore Parque Guell. This park is famous in the city of Barcelona and features the architecture of Antoni Guadí, an artist who they studied in the classroom.

a legacy overseas

by Sarah Moon

On June 19, 2016, 20 Spanish III and IV students took flight to discover the country of Spain for a 10 day expedition. Studying for months about the food, culture, and other aspects found there, was put into a new perspective as the students got to experience everything they covered in the classroom.

The students traveled lightly; the trip consisted of long travel to five different cities dispersed over the country. These cities included Barcelona, Sevilla, Segovia, Granada, and Madrid.

The things the students got to experience ranged from authentic Spanish traditional meals to visiting a city zoo. The Spanish teacher, Señora Jennifer Glass, is always excited to share her passion of Spanish culture with the students.

"This year, the dollar was very strong, allowing us to get more out of our dollars," Señora said. "We were able to do more things than in past years."

These things included going into Sagrada Familia, visiting the Madrid soccer stadium, and going ziplining.

"We also got to experience the suckling pig meal in Segovia as a group, something we did not do in past years," Señora said. This was Señora's seventh class trip; it is down to a science and she is excited for future trips. Although she enjoyed all aspects of the trip, she did have a couple favorites.

"There has been so much anticipation in past years to see the Sagrada Familia. It has been under construction, before, but also this was the first year we felt financially capable to go inside as it is expensive," Señora said. She also enjoyed the Turkish bathhouses in Granada known as "baños".

"Something about Granada is different than the other cities of Spain. It is very authentic, and I always make a visit whenever I am in Spain," Señora said.

Senior Hudson Elowsky reflect back on the trip.

"It was one of the best experiences of my life. Señora was so much fun, and our group of guys got along so well. It is something we still talk about every day at school. I had the luck of turning eighteen when I was there. I would do it all over again in a second," Elowsky said

Charlevoix's Dairy Grille Pig Brings Home To Spain

A group of two girls on the trip brought along a friend for the journey.

All working at Charlevoix's local Dairy Grille, Marlo Schwartzfisher and Nichole Hart incorporated the pink Dairy Grille pig on the expedition.

"We found the Dairy Grille pig in the parking lot at work one day. We brought him along to take some pictures to hang up at work when we got home," Schwartzfisher said. He also comforted the young ladies in the long stretch overseas.

"We had a little piece of home with us," Hart said.

one band, one sound, one legacy

"A band is not proud because it performs well; it performs well because it is proud" George Parks

by Bailey Falting

From playing the recorder in middle school, to picking out what instrument, to play, to fulfilling that instrument and maybe trying out a few more, the Rayder band has grown.

According to teacher Mr. Tom Harder, the band has gotten a lot larger (45 students), although Harder says size doesn't mean quality.

"These two things are barley related: A group isn't good because it's large; a group is good because it plays well," Harder said.

The band doesn't attend outright competitions. They usually perform at an Exhibition in Traverse City, where every marching band in northern Michigan competes against each other. According to Harder, the CHS was well received.

"Directors were commenting on specific sections," Harder said. "I've never heard a drumline like that in a band of 45- that's incredible;" "I wish my 12 trumpets sounded like your six;" "That was only three trombones??? That's amazing," were some of the comments Harder heard.

Harder noted how unique each person in the band is.

"There's something very special about taking 45 wildly different people who share this one thing in common and working together toward a goal," Harder said.

Harder said that each person must be at peak performance during the season. No one can "sit the bench" like in other sports. He said everyone is "in" at the same time.

Students agree that Marching Band is much more "fun" than concert band.

"We play songs we actually know, and we are active, not to mention we get to wear our pajamas to our practices which is cool, " freshman drumline symbols crasher Margaret Drost said.

From 6th grade to 12th grade, senior William Habel IV has been playing the Trombone. He is considering going into the Military band after graduation.

Perfecting every instrument or task given to her, senior Lauren Pitcher has been dedicated to band for the past six years. Her hard work has paid off, and she is now the Drum Major.

"I was in Mr. Schultz's class about to take a test when I got the email. I almost hyperventilated, it was the most exciting moment of my life. Personally, I love being Drum Major; it's exhilarating. Being in front of all the people in the stands, and having people look up to you. There's nothing like it. But of course I do miss the marching aspect of Marching Band," Pitcher said. Pitcher has played a little bit of everything. From the Clarinet, B-flat Clarinet, E-Flat Clarinet, Contra Base Clarinet, Trumpet, and the Tenner Sax. Pitcher is going to continue using her band skills at LSSU.

His father Mike Ritter played trombone and was a big influence on Alan joining band. Three. Focusing on the drum major, waiting for her que, sophomore Ana Smith plays the saxophone during half time game. Smith has been in band for four years and has learned to play Alto Sax, Tenner Sax, & Clarinet. She played clarinet because her mom had one, Mr. Harder encouraged her to play, and she wanted to play tenner Sax. FOUR. Being one of the only tuba players in the band, freshman Charles Pop decided to play tuba because there was only one other tuba player. He said he enjoyed the feeling of being in front of everyone in the half time show, he felt the rush of adrenaline and he cant wait for the next few years of playing.

many honors

by Micayle Vondran & Benjamin Peterson

When senior Noah Carson saw junior Daniel Nesburg and Benjamin Peterson's names, he knew these were the people he'd induct.

"I knew both of them from sports -Danny through club and high school soccer and Ben through cross country. I knew I'd have more personal stories to tell."

Carson took information from both of their applications to formulate his induction speech.

"Ben did something pretty cool; he talked about how he exemplified all the four pillars. For Danny, he had a line that stuck with me, 'I don't think I'll be a good candidate, I know I will.' I used that in the last line of my speech about him," Carson said.

Twenty-four juniors and three seniors were inducted during the fall ceremony - one of the biggest induction classes ever.

One reason students apply for NHS is the ability to work with kids who are motivated academically.

Junior Kenzi Cunningham applied for a couple reasons. She said because she knew it would look good for college, and it's also a good opportunity to help out in the school and community.

"Being able to work with "like minded" people - our goal is to help people. Everyone wants to help others and help out. You know that everyone wants to," Carson stated.

Delivering his speech, senior Noah Carson inducts junior Daniel Nesburg. "I was honored," Nesburg said with pride in his eyes about being inducted into NHS.

doctors leave a legacy, so will i

A nurse, a physical therapist, a medical laboratory technologist, a surgeon, and a dietitian.

At Charlevoix Middle/High school Health Occupations is an opportunity for students to independently explore and expand their knowledge in a chosen area. Through research and hands on experience they concentrate on one to two professions, and hopefully prepare for their future. At this time, they go to the hospital (Munson Healthcare Center), Dr. Balasz's office (dentist), and the Charlevoix Animal Hospital. They have nursing and other professions to observe and ask questions.

"The Health Occupation is a field of medicine," says teacher Mrs. Mabel Carson.

"It is designed for students to begin to understand our health system, provides the chance for the to learn more about the professions, and a brief overview of the human body."

Everyone takes health occupations for different reasons, some students take it for fun, others take it because they know they want to pursue a career in the health field.

"In middle school we all had to take health class, and it was something that interested me so I thought about having a future in it," senior Alison Jarema said.

Ranging from sohomore to senior students, everyone is at different levels of experiences and opportunities.

"I like helping people, but I never thought I'd be interested in it until I took the class. This year has been special because I am able to follow around the nurses and do hands on things with the patients, besides just watching the nurses do their job," senior Bree Farmer said.

Checking the monitor, junior Shelby Wurst helps out the doctor she is shadowing. "Working in the hospital has helped me get ready for my future because I get to see the reality of working in the setting of a hospital," Wurst said.

tackle, tacos and more

By Lea Holst

Being a part of Mrs. Kretovic's class came with a lots of extraordinary activities. One of the ones the students had been working on was the Tall Tales Tackle shop. The students participated in the shop and help making the whole store happen.

"The tackle shop teaches me how to work and improve my working skills," freshman Autumn Penny said.

Students get a list of targets that they have to complete during their day at the shop. The list includes working on their social skills and such skills as cooking, building, working in a store and work in general.

"The best part about working at the shop is that I get to work with my classmates; we get into groups and do stuff as cooking and building which is fun when you're doing it with your friends," Penny said.

It allows the students to do professional work but at the same time share that experience with their friends.

"I have learned things that I know can use outside school; we learned how to build which has helped me even outside school," Penny said.

Not only do the students work in a store and sell their products, they will be able to take the things they have learned and use them for their own individual purposes.

taco boats for everyone

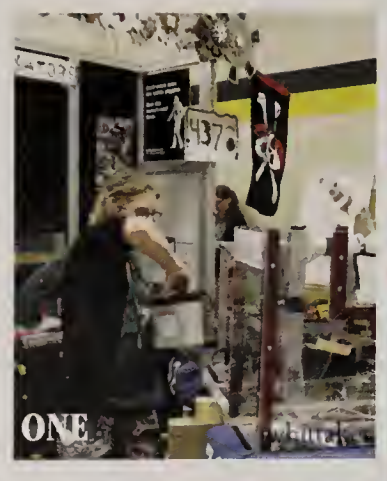
Nathan Davis has taco boats for everyone as he receives his check from the Uncle Ben's rice company. Davis entered the competition and made it to the top 10. Nathan took first place for more than double the votes from second place. He earned $30,000 for CMHS.

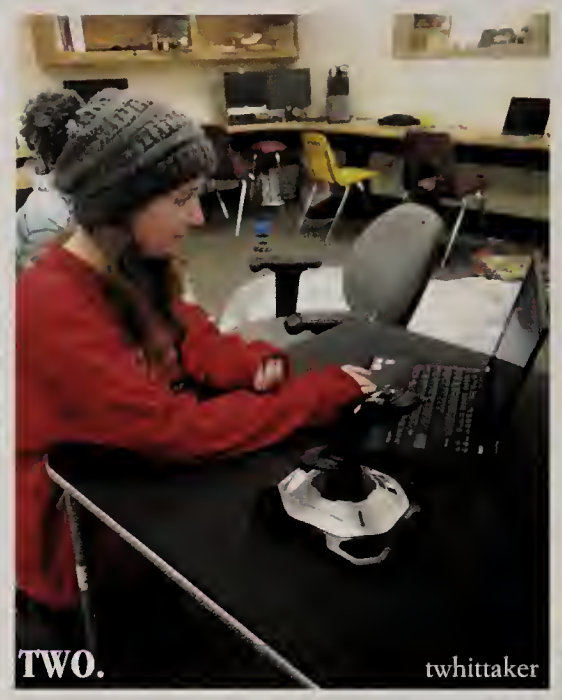
Brandon Mason and Isaac Preseau make bean bags for the Tall Tail Tackle Shop. Students worked each week at the shop, selling, cooking and making things to sell.

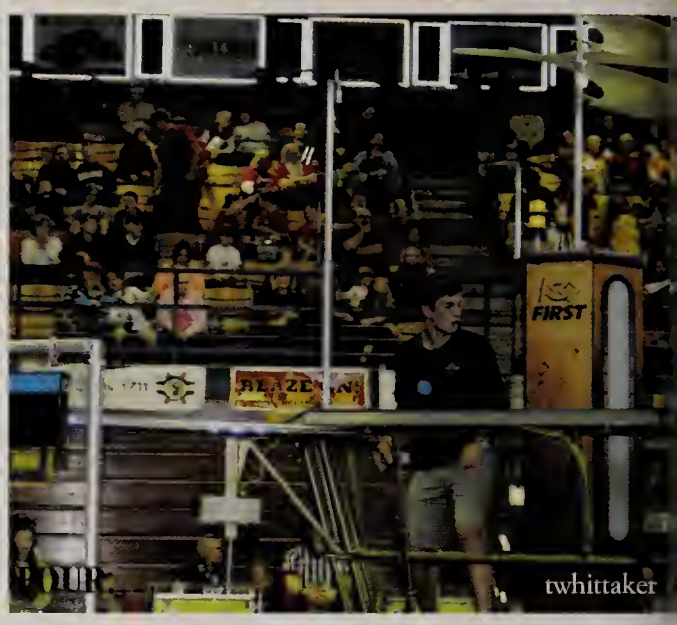
Students who attended and helped in the Tall Tales Tackle shop work to improve their employability skills. The list includes mostly chores for students like senior Charlie Glenny who is working on sweeping the floor.

Listening to his teacher in class, senior Draven Shorty learns new things taught to him by Mrs. Kretovic. Draven helps the recycling team out by going around and getting the recycle paper from every class.

ONE. Quickly exchanging the robot battery, senior Marlo Schwartzfisher rushes to get prepared for the next match. "We keep one battery charging at all times," Schwartzfisher said,"It's the safest way to stay on top of things." TWO. Concentrating on the computer, junior Grace Ochs looks over the coding and checks for mistakes "If you don't pay really close attention to the details, you can make a seriously stupid mistake," Ochs said. "You have to precise." THREE. " When you're working on the robot, you have to remember three things," Oliver Deyoung said. "Be thorough, be preventative, and take nothing for granted," he added. FOUR. Spinning around the post, senior Matthew Good looks to see how much time is left in the two minute match. "The winner of the match was going to go to the playoffs," Good said. "We had lost the previous one so it was do or die." FIVE. Putting in place the brace, seniors Matthew Good and Thomas Lynskey carefully put the final touches on the Robot for the final prepping before the state competition.







Training the next generation

"We help kids who are participating with lego league," senior Matthew Good said. The school does a great job trying to keep kids interested participating in robotics after they graduate from lego league.

"The kids have a much simpler version of what we do in robotics; they get assigned a project and are given a limited amount of resources to complete it," Thomas Lynskey said.

"All of the seniors involved really love working with the kids," teacher Tom Schultz said.

Robotics is the future of technology, and the kids are the future of this nation.

"I just want these kids to stay interested," senior Oliver Deyoung said.

With pistol like precision, seniors Oliver Deyoung and Marlo Schwartzfisher carefully check and secure the smaller parts of the robot. "You're dealing lots of small parts," senior Marlo Schwartzfisher said. "So there is no room for being reckless."

do the robot

by Tyvin Whittaker

In August of 2016, a full automated truck completed the first official delivery from New York to Pittsburgh. This marks just one of the ways that robotic technology is quickly creeping into the everyday life of Americans.

Robotics is often the fist introduction students from CHMS have to the rapidly expanding world of robotic technology.

"Every year the people in charge of the competition release a new game with new rules," teacher Tom Schultz said.

"We then have a limited amount of time to build a robot that can play the game and do the tasks that are required," Schultz said.

Each student takes a specialty that they pretty much exclusively work on. Normally something related to what our interest are.

"I plan on majoring in engineering, and this program has really helped me grow my interests in this area over the last two years," Deyoung said.

Deyoung is one of the four seniors in the robotics club. Thomas Lynskey, Marlo Schwartzfisher, and Matthew Good compose the the other three.

"I've been doing this for three years," Schwartzfisher said.

"Having to work as a team and be creative has really led me to grow in not only my student life, but also my everyday life," Schwartzfisher said.

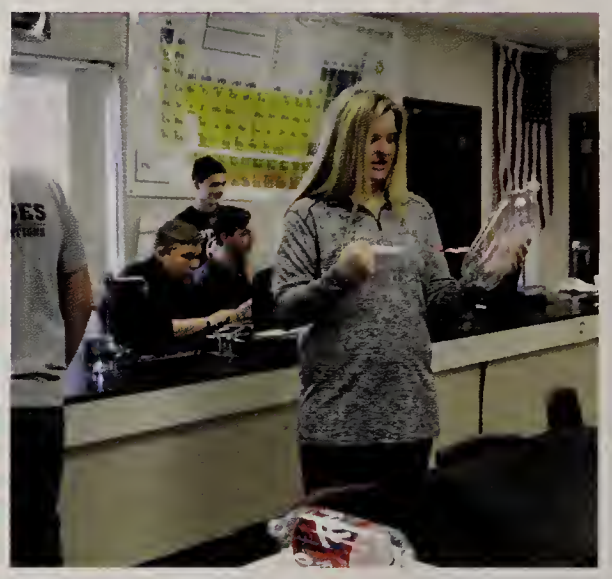
Student were taking different metals and lighting them on fire to see how they would react and see what color they would burn. "It was really interesting (as you can tell by the expression on my face) to see what ones would catch on fire and all the colors they would change," McCullough said

TWO. Focusing on the specimen in front of her, freshman Ariell McClellan tries to find all of the important parts of a corn leaf. "It looked like a strand of plant cells. It was pretty easy to find the mitochondrion and the cell wall and what not. I find biology really interesting," McClellan said. THREE. Writing notes to placing clay on a skeleton, junior Alexandria Snabes learns about the human anatomy. "I'm not going into the medical career or anything like that, but I think it's good for me to be able to learn more about my body and everything that's going on inside of it," Snabes said.

FOUR. Prepping the bottles in physical science are sophomores Adam Hybl and Payton Turner. Hybl and Turner were determining which water filter would work the best. They found that sand filters worked the best but was the slowest and absorbed the most. FIVE. In Mr. Klinger's human anatomy class, the students placed clay on skeletons to represent muscle system. Senior James Spencley said, "human anatomy is a challenging course but I've learned a lot from it so far. I'm not going into anything medical, so its not really a useful class for my career, but its actually a pretty interesting subject."

Hard at work studying, Payton Novotny and Rylynn Sladek showcase their enthusiastic excitement for the science project to begin. Novotny and Sladek partnered for an enviromental science project. The class received a grant through Michigan State University.

Unloading the supplies, sophomores Payton Turner and Adam Hybl eagerly help Mrs. Kristine Burmistser prepare the for class. Burmeister received a grant from MSU environmental journalism which allowed students to purchase materials.



Carefully getting prepared, sophomore Haley Coss partakes in the science related activities in Mrs. Burmister's physical science class. "I Love the opportunity to earn," Coss said.

Mrs. Kristine Burmeisters chemistry class starts the year off with a cool project. They had to take three different cups and mix dish soap, salt, and sugar with water to get three different mixtures. Once they had their mix they took straws, dipped it in the mixture, and then started blowing bubbles on the table to see what mixture could make the biggest bubble! "It was our first experiment of the year, and it was a great way to get back to school because it was fun," junior Delbert Hart III said.

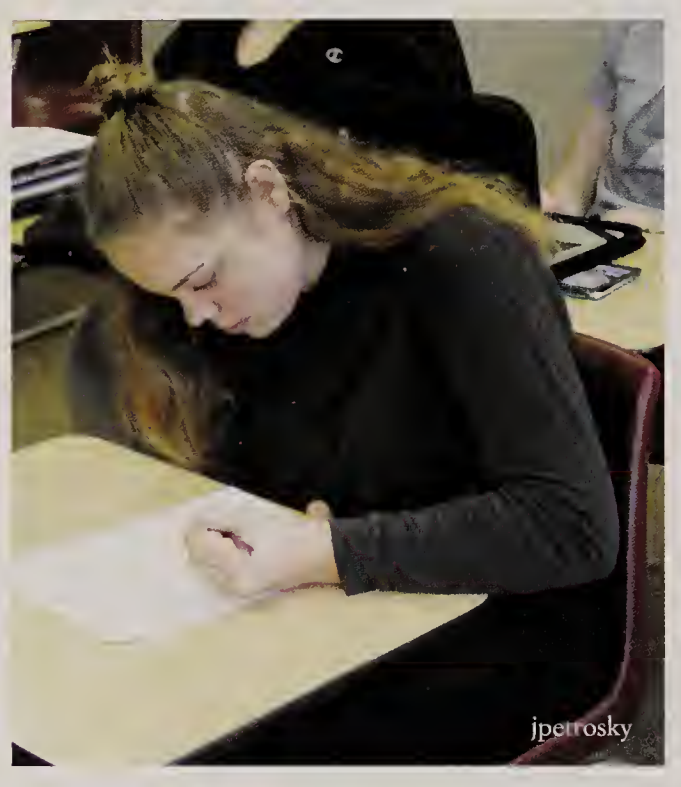
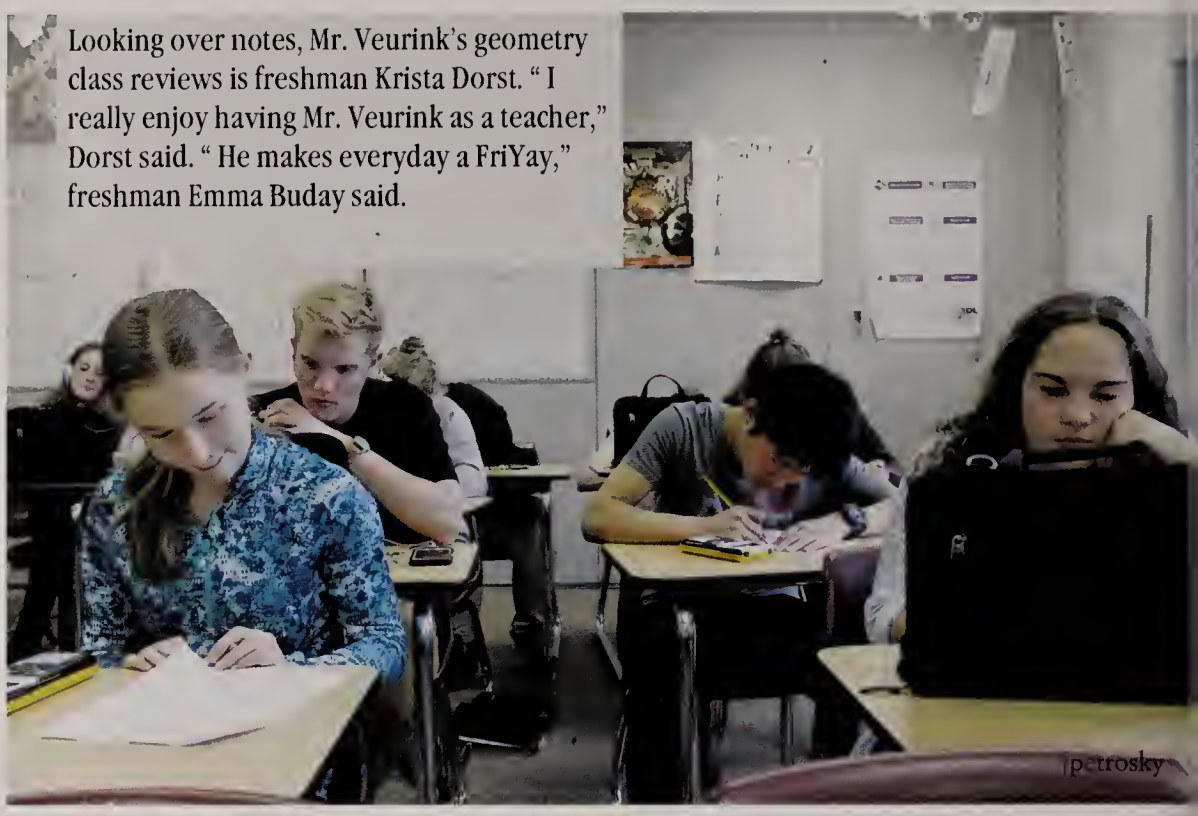
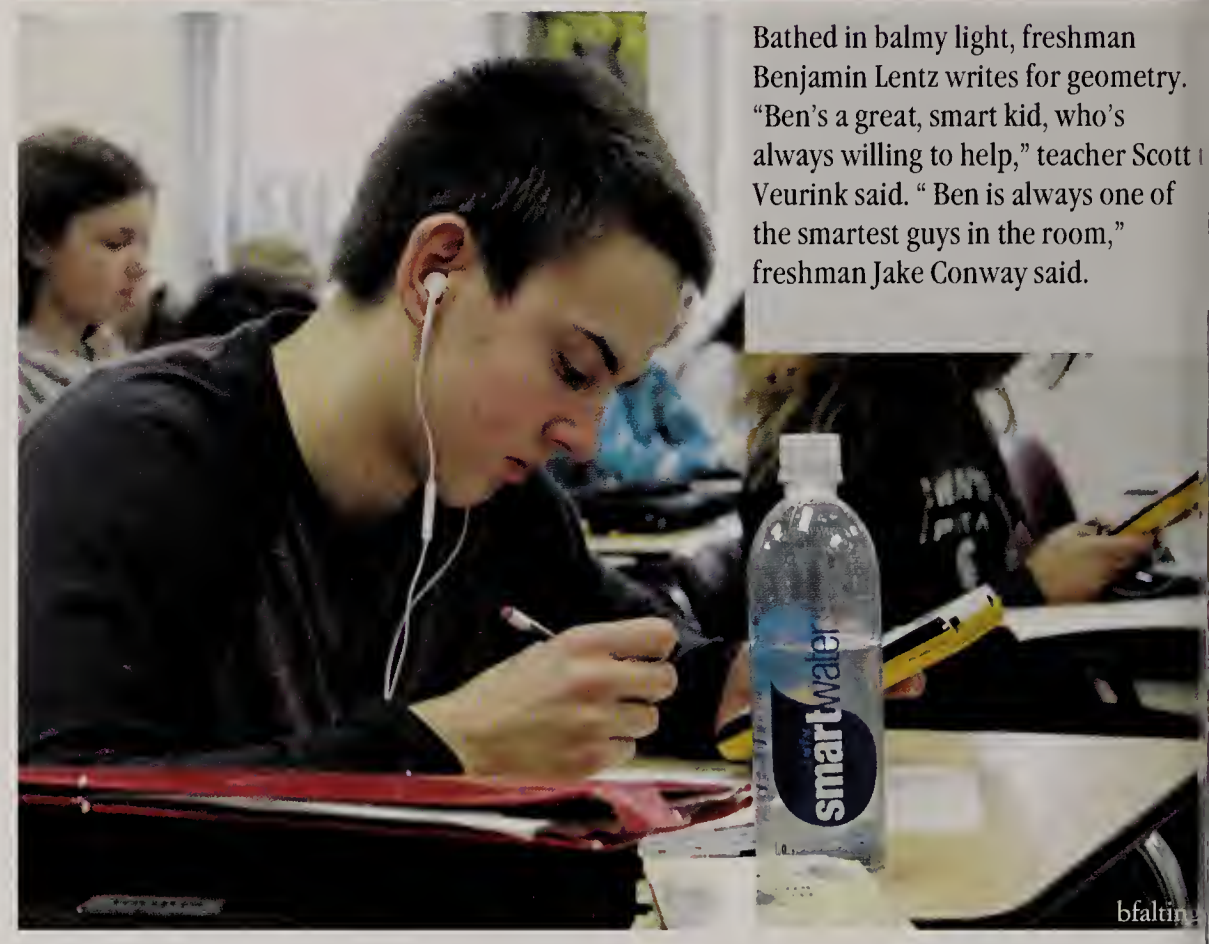
Blond and rugged, freshman Jake Conway jams on music in math. " I don't really have to study cuz' math is really easy right now," Conway said. "My father is all like 'why aren't you studying,' but I just read a book and that subdues him," Conway said.



Wondering who invented proofs and whether or not she can beat them up, freshman Maxy Fuchs works on her math. "Maxy is a smart cookie, she seems to have a good grasp on the subject," freshman Elisabeth Petrosky said.



Looking over notes, Mr. Veurink's geometry class reviews is freshman Krista Dorst. " I really enjoy having Mr. Veurink as a teacher," Dorst said. " He makes everyday a FriYay," freshman Emma Buday said.



Bathed in balmy light, freshman Benjamin Lentz writes for geometry. "Ben's a great, smart kid, who's always willing to help," teacher Scott Veurink said. " Ben is always one of the smartest guys in the room," freshman Jake Conway said.

You step over the frame of the door. Stacaco keys clink, the scent of lamination creeps off a dented desk and ochre light fills the room. The intoxicating scent of white board markers permeates the room, mixing with the scent of the outdoors through an open window, and swirling together with the earthy scent of erasers in a surreptitiously pleasant blend. You've just crossed over into the "Math Zone."

While some think math class consists merely of paper and pencil, in this digital age, computers come into play too.

" We use computers a lot more than I thought we would," junior Delbert Hart III said.

Hart had Algebra 2 with Mrs. Ann Gorney.

"While the Macbooks are valuable pieces of technology, I feel like a lot of kids use them for the wrong reasons," teacher Mrs. Ann Gorney said. "The lack of touch screens make them less intuitive for doing higher levels of math, when we introduce logs, exponents, etc," Gorney said.

"My favorite part of math is the teachers. I had the honor of portraying Mr. Veurink on Rayder News the other week," freshmen Caleb Pittman said.

A main theme seen throughout the year was how great students found their math teachers, with not a single interviewee having a negative thing to say, aside from the heavy homework load.

"My teacher is pretty chill," sophomore Emoyneah Ford said.

"No girls, so it makes it a real bromance class." senior Michael Davis said.

If you walk to the construction class you will be facing a bunch of goofy guys, spending every minute of the class working hard.

After finding out about the cause the Charlevoix Construction team got to work to make them a house to help their business grow.

"You learn things that you can actually use later in life, so you can be more independent and be able to do things on your own," junior Dylan Starr said.

lifting their legacy

by Bac Milan

Mr. Todd Klinger has been teaching the athletic training class for nine years.

"I started teaching this class at the beginning of the 2008-09 school year," Klinger said. "I started teaching this class because I wanted to help our athletes improve.

This would give them time on the school day to train because they do not have the time after school. It also allows them to train all year."

Athletic training is a class offered to high schoolers where kids can go in and lift weights and do exercises that will help their performance when playing sports.

"I think there are many reasons why being in this class can help kids performances in sports. It can help prevent injuries, that kid can get stronger, can increase their self confidence in themselves, and can build camaraderie with teammates," Klinger said.

Mid-way through the year, the training room moved to behind the bleachers in upstairs in the gym. This was done as construction was started on the new auxiliary gym. When completed, the new gym will host a new weight room. The old weight room will become a wrestling room.

When asked about what he enjoys the most about about students getting better athletically, Klinger said, "I enjoy watching them have success and the joy it brings them. From what I've seen this year, I think Thomas Rudolph has improved the most. He has been a great student to have in this class throughout the year and he always gives 100 percent into everything he does."

"My max rep is 135-ish pounds but in this picture, it's only 95 pounds. I started lifting last summer when the morning lifting for football started. I continued to lift once school started up because I joined the class of athletic training. It helps me for football because the strength and conditioning that makes you a bigger and faster player plays a big role in how you perform on the field."
- Sophomore Thomas Rudolph

"The most I can lift is 135 pounds and the reason I joined the athletic training class is because I like working out."
- Sophomore Danzelle Williams

"The most I can lift is 135 pounds. I wanted to get better physically for football season and wrestling, so that's why I joined this class. Plus my friends were doing it too, so I decided to do it with them."
- Junior Jeremy Chernauckas

"I wanted to join this class because some of my friends did too, so I thought it'd be fun to do it with them. The most I lifted this year was 130 pounds."

ONE. Laid back on her computer is freshman Dani Milazzo. Milazzo was finishing up last minute editing. "I am happy that I can help people re-live their high school memories through the book," said Milazzo. TWO. Interviewing for her page over e-mail, freshman Sydney Martin sits quietly on her computer. "I like yearbook because it's like another English class where I can express my ideas," Martin said. THREE. Thinking of ideas, junior Abbey Scholten starts her senior feature page. "I like yearbook because it helps me help other people remember their years here at CHS," Scholten said. FOUR. About to take pictures is freshman Abigail Cunningham. "I like yearbook because I can be myself around the people in the class, while getting work done at the same time," Cunningham said. FIVE. Talking to Mrs. Peterson, senior Bailey Falting is getting a check on her page. "I like yearbook because as a senior it's important to have memories to leave high school with," Falting said. SIX. Working on his page is sophomore Caleb Pittman. This was Pittman's first year being in the yearbook class. "This is fun because we occasionally get food. But it also takes a lot of hard work," Pittman said. SEVEN. Looking through the student directory, junior Jacob Petrosky gets ready to go interview someone for his page. " We get to create memories that will last forever," Petrosky said.

Getting ready to take a photo, freshman Margaret Drost checks the settings on her camera. "I got to know people I never though I would ever even talk to, but I enjoyed yearbook," Drost said.

we made the legacy

by Abigail Cunningham

Since this was freshman Margaret Drost's first year in the yearbook class, she learned some things that will help her in her other classes.

"Yearbook helped me not only learn how to use a camera but it also helped me with my grammar and writing skills," Drost said.

Although freshman Aria Blackford joined about 3/4 of the way through the year she took yearbook at her other school that she moved from.

"This class is fun cause you get to express your feelings through a page," Blackford said. Blackford used to attend Ellsworth schools.

As this was junior Bac Milan's first year in yearbook he has enjoyed the class.

"I thought this class was fun because my other class mates made it an enjoyable time," Milan said.

Even though junior Abbey Scholten joined the yearbook class after winter break she still got to learn new things about her other fellow classmates.

"I enjoyed learning new things about people that I didn't know before I was in this class. I also enjoyed just getting to design my own page," Scholten said.

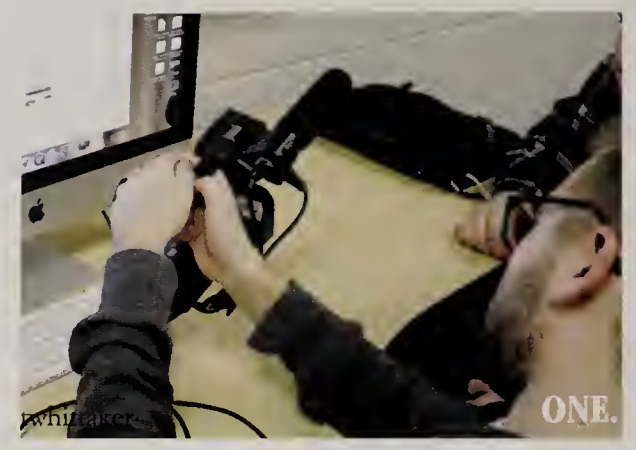
Because this was senior Allex Smith's last year he decided to take yearbook.

"I came into this class thinking it was going to be a breeze. And I thought it was going to be easy for me. But really it is a lot of work for me," Smith said.

Although senior Christopher Gregory moved into yearbook after Christmas break Gregory has still enjoyed himself in the class.

"I moved in here from statics and this class I found actually takes a lot of hard work and dedication. But we also get rewarded with food," Gregory said.

ONE. Inspecting the camera, senior Vladimir Barneveld clears the old footage.
"Always have to keep your space clear," Vladimir Barneveld said. If the work space get too cluttered it could very hard to think and get work done. "A clear space equals a clear mind," Barneveld said. TWO. Getting in the zone, junior Kelsey Crandall Marfuta looks to capture the moment while kids participate in career day. "You gotta block out distractions to be successful," Marfuta said. "When you're editing footage together you're looking for a flow, and it is a lot easier to edit with a nice flow if you film with one." THREE. The environment in which most Broadsquad shorts are made can be seen while the students casually slip into their routines as the class begins. "Each student has to four films/edits done each week," teacher Josh Block said. "So they have to work hard." FOUR. Juniors Kelsey Marfuta and Grace Way watch and review a finished broadsquad project. "You always can catch a mistake or two after "you watch it all the way through," Way said. FIVE. Editing his project together is junior Jake Cox,"The sound is very key in this process," he said, "Without clear sound the whole video can come up as wacky, especially if you move an audio file or something," Cox said.



legacy behind the camera

Sophia Sheets: Last year when Rayder TV became an official thing, senior Sophia Sheets was one of the three students in the cutting room.

"Nobody really had a clue what we were trying to do," Sheets said.

"We just went for the funniest coolest thing we could make, and well, now we've been doing that ever since."

Christopher Gregory has been in Broadcasting for four years much his entire high school career.

"Being a part of this for awhile, it was in the beginning stages gave me the ability to take a leadership position," Gregory said.

"My plan is to major in some sort of Video/ Broadcasting major in college," Gregory said Being a major part in this class for the last three years has allowed me to grow my creative interests and abilities.

Focusing on random students, senior Tyler McCallum looks to get the perfect shot of students passing by as they head through their daily routine. "You gotta remember to be patent otherwise you'll waste an opportunity," McCallum said.

hours and hours

by Tyvin Whitaker

With careful precision senior Tyler McCallum catches ongoing kids while they go from class to class. You can't be shaky and willy nilly, you gotta be precise otherwise you fail," McCallum said.

Some people think it only takes turning on a camera and pointing it in whatever direction you want to create a sure fire work of art. The truth is that it takes long hours of planning and sitting in front of a computer to meticulously create a final project that people will love. This is plight of the Rayder Broadcasting crew, headlined by a select group of 14 students, many of whom are seniors, they were tasked with the upkeep of the weakly "Rayder TV" and the training of the future leaders of "Broadsquad."

"This program has really exploded over the last two years," teacher Joshua Block said.

Block noted that the amount of interest in this program has grown tremendously The work these guys are doing will hopefully leave lasting legacy.

"No one really knew what we were doing when we started rolling with this program last year. It was revamped and headed in a forward direction," Block said.

According to senior Sophia Sheets, "Tensions were tight when the class first started. Everyone had a different idea where the creative energy should go."

"Come to think of it, some of our best works came in that time frame. But not long after we started we got a grant which enabled every student to have a work station. This really helped steer us in the right direction," Sheets said.

"We also go approved for MHSAA live streaming, and that was really exciting", senior Christopher Gregory said.

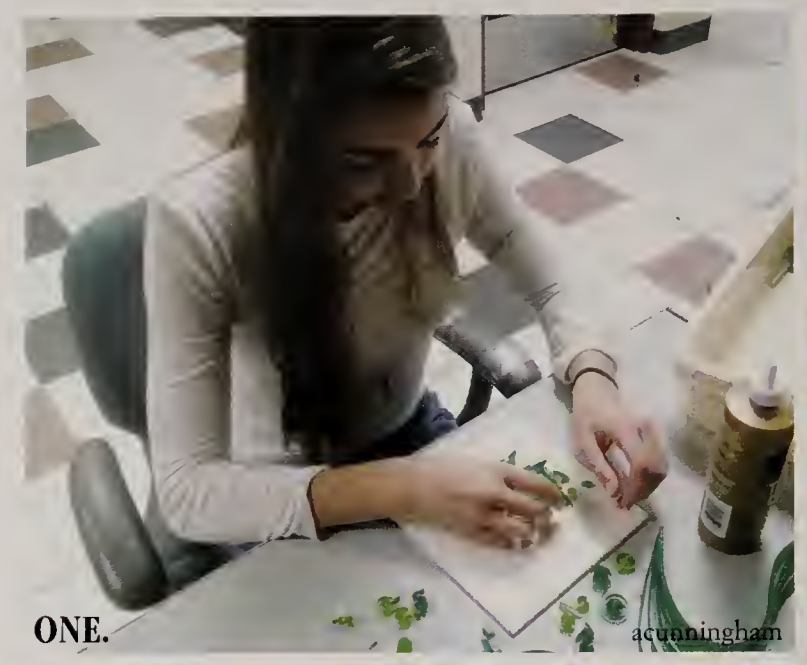
legacy bowls

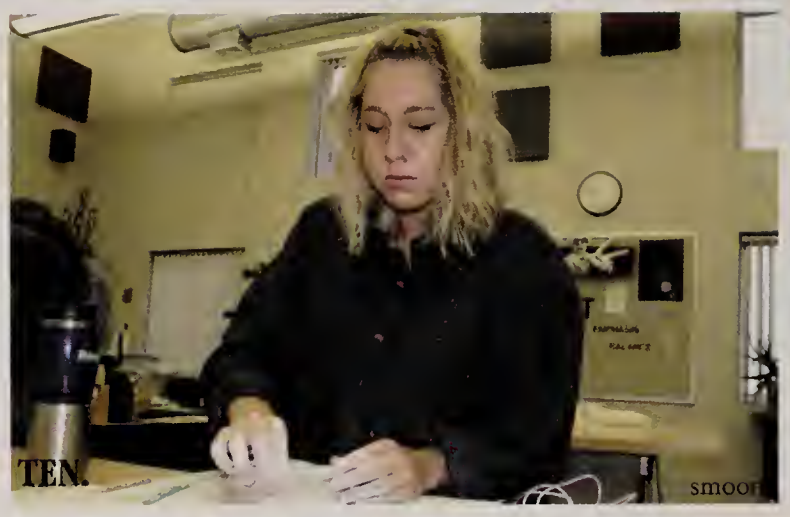
"I like to base a lot of my designs and pieces from organic figures and prints."
- Senior Erin Hybl

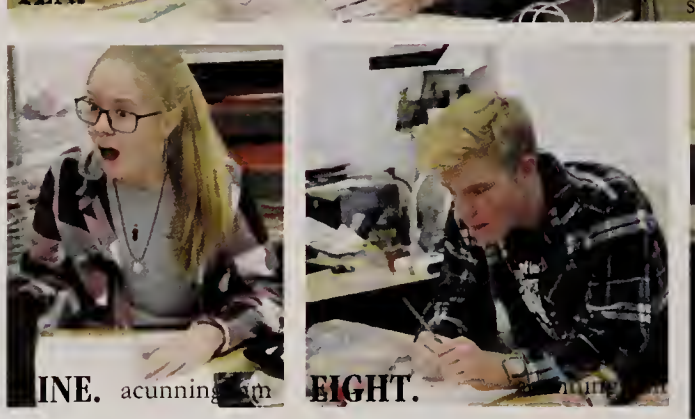
"The bowl shape was my design, but Marlo Schwartzfisher helped me come up with the cool drip design for the gaze."
- Senior Becca Moon

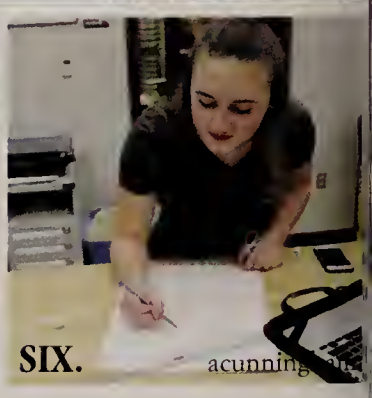
"I wanted to keep the design clean and simple, but still attractive to the eye."
- Senior Lydia Balyo

"The design was a basic bowl but the glaze is what makes it different."
-Junior Autum Paczesny









ONE. Working on her project, junior Olivia Jeakle makes a series of leaves changing colors with rolls of paper. "It's called quilling - when you make different coils and glue them together to make a picture. I saw a picture of it somewhere, and I thought it would be a fun thing to try," Jeakle said. TWO. Working is senior Alex Soto. "In all honesty it's an art class, and I like art, so I took it," Soto said. THREE. Enjoying her pottery class is senior Sophia Glazier. "I decided to take pottery because it was an opportunity I couldn't pass up. It's such a great class," Glazier said. FOUR. Inspecting her bowl is junior Kelsey Robinson. "I wanted to learn how to do some of the things that I have seen in videos online," Robinson said. FIVE. Although senior Julia Doskoch has taken this pottery class once before, she is taking it again. "I took it my sophomore year and loved it," Doskoch said. SIX. When freshman Grayce Sprecksell is in art, she "expresses my creativity in something I love," Sprecksell said. SEVEN. Working hard on her self portrait is sophomore Shyanna Powers. "I like art because it gives me time to be myself," Powers said. EIGHT. As freshman Jake Conway is having fun in his art class, he creates his "self portrait of my hot bod," Conway said. NINE. Having fun is sophomore Rylynn Sladek. "It's really fun and nice to just express what your feeling," Sladek said. TEN. Making a planter is senior Sara McClanathan. "I'm interested in learning about different medias and their techniques, so I have a well rounded experience," McClanathan said.

let's be creative

As senior Jenna Guthrie sits in art she works on finishing her project. "Art allows me to freely expand my creativity," Guthrie said.

"I've found that while art allows me to freely expand my creativity, design provides direction and purpose for my creativity," senior Jenna Guthrie said.

Guthrie had won Mr.Guirey's golden paintbrush over her cumulative work at the end of her freshman year.

"In my most recent project, I altered the "World Wildlife Fund" panda logo and lettering to a disappearing polar bear and the acronym to rely only on drop shadows. The new version represents the effects of global warming," Guthrie said.

Guthrie was looking to continue doing some art after high school and on into college. For the next step and part of her life.

"Right now I'm most interested in combining graphic design with content marketing and copying. This includes logo design and product descriptions," Guthrie said.

Junior Olivia Jeakle has now completed her 3rd year of art.

"I like art because it is a really great way to just relax and use your creativity that you really don't get to do anywhere else in school. It's nice to be able to relax and just let your creativity take over every once in a while," junior Olivia Jeakle said.

Jeakle had been in Mr. Guirey's art class since she was in the ninth grade. Creating lots of pieces of art.

"I have had a few pieces in the Crooked Tree Art Show, but I've never won any prizes for them," Jeakle said.

Jeakle was planning on taking Mr. Guirey's mixed media or portfolio class next year as a senior.

"I don't think I will go into a career in the art field, but it is very good to take classes like art to stay well rounded, and I think art will be a great hobby for me," Jeakle said.

Since Jeakle has been in art classes since she was a freshman, she has created so many different kinds of pieces of art.

"I like to make a lot of different pieces that are very hard to compare. Last year I made a blocked out shape of Michigan and filled it in with different buttons and beads which turned out pretty nice, but it's still hard to compare that to something like a still life," Jeakle said.

yes, we were there!

by Jacob Petrosky

In January, a group of juniors and seniors, led by Mrs. Annemarie Conway journeyed to the nation's capitol to watch the swearing in of President Donald Trump (#45).

The entire trip turned out to be rather tumultuous, with the actual attending of the inauguration being in doubt.

"We saw some protests, but no riots," said senior Tyvin Whittaker.

The class also took in some culture while in town, visiting museums, an inaugural ball and seeing The National Harmonic Symphony perform multiple songs, with "Rhapsody in Blue," being a particular highlight.

" I almost cried like three times it was so beautiful," junior Grace Ochs said.

According to teacher, Mrs. Annemarie Conway, crowds at the inauguration were very light. There were some protesters, though they were prior to the speech. Some of the supporters around the protesters were disrespectful.

"We had to go through three security checks, which was unusual. We heard from a TSA officer that Trump wanted tanks in his parade. We left before any violence broke out to eat dinner on a cruise," Conway said.

viva Cuba!

by Jacob Petrosky

"I think I petted this pig," junior Hunter Jenson said, polishing off some pork and beans. The school trip to Cuba was an unprecedented voyage back in time to slow-burn, Soviet-Era communism.

"It was awesome. I had a great reason to wear my tank tops and let the guns out to breathe," junior Phil Conway said.

"We were on an Explorica tour, which was really cool and let us really see the people and culture of the country, which was phenomenal to have a chance to do after how long it's been shut off to America. There's not even cell service," junior Hunter Jenson said. "I particularly enjoyed being able to go into the slums of Havana, to see the optimism of these people even in extreme poverty, ' Jenson said.

With the average monthly wage in Cuba being approximately $18.77 in American currency and the country still in the doldrums of a Post-Soviet recession, the time to see poverty was certainly ripe. The citizens subsist almost entirely off of the government-supplied ration, which is 60 percent rice and beans.

"The countryside was definitely one of the best things I've ever seen. I particularly enjoyed the eco-farms. Meeting these people digging a living out of the dirt with no real modern farming technology is fascinating. Many were also fluent in English which is doubly impressive, because, where do they even get the time?" Jenson said.

Taking a quick nap, freshman Jake Conway rewinds during a class trip to Cuba. "The heat was getting to everybody," junior Philip Conway said. The group was there in June.

" The weather was absolutely smothering. I must have went through three shirts a day," Jenson said.

Eating their first meal in the city, junior Grace Freds, sophomore Carson Gauthier, and freshmen, Makayla Clees, Kirsten Wagner, an Margaret Drost, feast at the Hard Rock Cafe. "It was pretty good they had good food and I liked all the antiques around the walls," said Clees.

Picking up her band friend for a picture in Millennium park, sophomores Kiley Mann and Maximus Hinkle laugh at the "Bean" in the park. " My favorite part was the medieval times dinner, it was super cool. I really like eating chicken with my hands," said Mann.

Getting ready for the symphony, senior Miranda Stieglitz, and freshmen Makayla Clees, Kirsten Wagner, and Margaret Drost, dress fancy for a sophisticated show by extremely great musicians. "I was asleep part of it, but the stuff I did listen to was really awesome," said Wagner.

Q&A with Mr. Tom Harder:

Q- Concert, Marching, Jazz, or Pep Band. Which is your favorite?
A- Impossible to answer- I like different aspects of each one. Playing pop tunes is fun, and I love the game day atmosphere, so Marching and Pep Band are rewarding. Concert band takes the most work by far, but is very fulfilling for me as a musician and educator.

Q- What is your favorite thing about Pep Band?
A- I like the atmosphere of the band. Marching band is significantly more discipline based, with whistle commands, attention positions, field formations, etc. Pep Band's just a party! We hang out, and when it's halftime, we play some music and have some fun. It's neat to watch the student section dance along to something the band is playing or have them bop along when the drumline plays on a time-out. The energy level provided by the band really helps make a Friday night game come to life.

Q- How many kids are in the band?
A- We have approximately 36 in the Beginning Program, 65 in the Middle School Band, and another 44 in the HS Band, so our 6-12 Band Program serves about 145 students.

Playing their instruments to the star spangled banner, freshmen, Lily Prevo, Hailey Himebaugh, Gavriel Lacroix, Helen Hanchin, juniors Renee Johnson, Aba Glazier, and Susan Dong, and sophomore Julia Ivester kick off the ball game with a tribute to their country. They also played "You Give Love a Bad Name," "Thanks For the Memories," "Kosher," "Confident," "Runaway Baby," "I Knew You Were Trouble," and "Frogs."

death, woods & adventure

by Caleb Pittman

"The first character I ever played needed to talk few times and that really helped because it made me more confident of my abilities on stage," junior Kain Truman said.

"It's interesting playing two characters in one show because of all of the costume changes are very short amounts of time, but I was given my own changing area so it wasn't the worst," Truman said.

"The first mysterious man scene in particular I changed to quick and nearly ruined an entire scene by going on when I wasn't supposed to then I remember that I also had to slowly crouch down and get off the stage," Truman said.

This all came from Kain Truman who played the "Mysterious Man" and the Narrator from the P.A. program's, "Into The Woods." A story based off the Grimm's Fairy Tale of the olden days with a twist that all of the stories are connected by the main characters The Baker (played by Caleb Pittman) and The Baker's Wife (Julia Ivester). They're on an adventure to have their child after a curse is laid on their family tree by an evil witch asking for a cow as white as milk, a cape as red as blood, Hair as yellow as corn and a slipper as pure as gold.

"I would say my friends, but then I would have to share them so I guess I have nothing. However if I'm be serious I would have to say the social aspect and the way that you can make so many friends in this family like place," Truman said after being asked what the most magical thing in P.A. is.

Speaking out is junior Kain Truman playing "The Mysterous Man" from "Into the Woods." A play being held by Charlevoix's P.A. program. In addition to playing "The Mysterous Man," Truman was also the narrator.

a couple of bakers

Playing the couple of the Baker and the Baker's Wife is sophomore Julia Ivester and freshman Caleb Pittman as the main characters of "Into The Woods."

"It Takes Two" because the fact that we weren't uncomfortable because of past experience of us being couples," Ivester said.

"Yeah, I have to agree but for me it was the fact we created the majority of the dance moves we did in the song," Pittman said.

They said in response to being asked what their favorite scene was with each other. "It was nice because Caleb and I are good friends, and I feel like if it were almost any other person it would have been weird," Ivester said, "It was fun because Julia and I joke around all the time and because we've done similar things before too," Pittman said.

"Before midnight she started to loose her cool and after that everything she is working on starts to fall apart," House said. THREE. Belting out his feelings, sophomore Tristan Simpson sings Agony from "Into The Woods." "I mean... Agony what is more fun then screaming about your problems while tearing off your shirt off," Simpson said. FOUR. Ready for royalty is freshman Helen Hanchin playing "Cinderella" from "Into The Woods." "I think Cinderella would be friends with the Baker's Wife, because they have scenes together, but the Baker's Wife's death happens, so they never have time to become acquainted," Hanchin said. FIVE. Singing sweetly, senior Lauren Pitcher performs as Cinderella's Mother from "Into The Woods." "I think seeing the way all the kids go on stage and the magical feeling of watching the kids who you have to help do their math to then go up and sing the very complicated music is my favorite thing," Pitcher said.

Six was the lucky number. The 2017 group that went to New York City was the smallest ever that Señora Jenny Glass had taken. The small group allowed for them to go places that wouldn't be possible with the typical large group size, like The Sugar Factory.

"The Sugar Factory was like homecoming but 60 times better, the music was so good, and the place was poppin'," senior Beth Veenstra said.

"Going with a small flexible group was way more fun, because it gave us the opportunity to talk with each other and decide how we wanted to spend our day, as well as giving us options the past groups didn't have," junior Spencer Haan said.

The class went to a three hour Broadway showing of "The Lion King."

"Seeing the Broadway show was definitely my favorite part of the trip," senior Mackenzy O'Leary said.

The group also traveled through Central Park, and made wishes in the fountain. On the last night in the city, after running along sidewalks and a driving range, the group was able to catch an amazing sunset just in time.

"Due to Spencer's uncanny ability to be on time, we almost missed the sunset, and consequently almost ruined Kenzy's night," junior Walker Fogle said.

The class went on a cultural walk through Spanish Harlem with tour guide Figs, and got to see many murals, paintings, and statues dedicated to Spanish figures through out the years.

"I'm super glad I got to experience New York with this group; it was awesome," Haan said.

Tugging on the rope, juniors Abigail Noirot and Rachel Nesburg struggle to make any headway. "Tug of war definitely isn't our strong suit, but we get a good laugh out of it," Nesburg said. The junior class lost the "Tug of War" both during Homecoming and Winterfest. They joked that maybe they could take on the 7th and 8th graders.

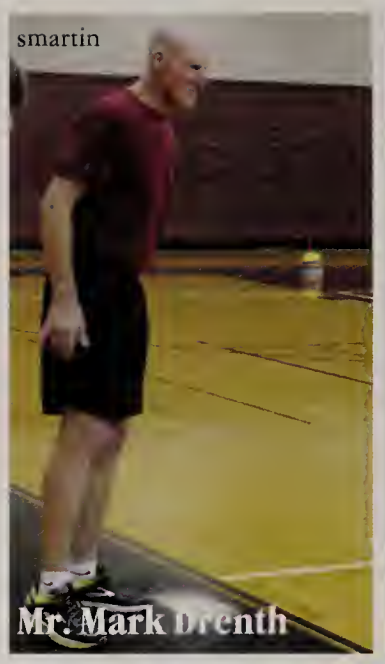
ONE. Delivering his poem, freshman Alexander Kwapisz recites poem "Life" by Edith Warton. "I felt a sense of awe as I heard the audience roar, but also a sense of determination to successfully present my work" Kwapisz said. TWO. In the middle of an experiment, junior Colin Smith makes sure he has all his materials. "Science class is pretty fun when we're doing cool experiments," Smith said. THREE. As a duet, freshman Helen Hanchin and sophomore Julia Ivester sing "Holy Night" together. "I was kind of nervous that people would think I was lame, but then I went up there and went 'bam!'" Hanchin said. FOUR. Playing a mash up of songs, senior Malcom Williams performs in the Holiday talent show. "I taught myself how to play the piano in church," Williams said. Williams took lessons in 7th and 8th grade. FIVE. Sitting on the top of the car, seniors Lukila Witthoeft and Luke Buday ride together. "I loved getting to be with my best friend all week, especially because he made me laugh during the parade and on the field," Witthoeft said. SIX. Dancing to "Umbrella" by Rihanna, freshman Benjamin Lentz substitutes in for fellow freshman, Ella Gafney. "I subbed for Ella because she was getting stage fright, so I took over and just tried to have as much fun as possible out on the stage. I think the freshmen had so much success because of the happy vibe that our show had from the Spring Break and Happy skits," Lentz said.

brotherly love!

by Sarah Moon



As we grow and change, often times the ones we see daily, such as our siblings are in our lives less and less frequently.

This is not the case for the Drenth brothers at Charlevoix High School. Attending the same building every day during the school years, the Drenths share an interesting perspective to their workplace and their brotherhood. It is the closeness they have as brothers that makes this a positive experience, and despite their differences, they both benefit from their position.

"One beneficial aspect of working together is having each other for reminders," Doug Drenth said.

Although siblings working together is somewhat a rarity, the closeness is nothing new for Mark and Doug. Mark is one and a half years older than Doug. They grew up attending the same school, and they even both attended CMU. As if they couldn't get any closer, Mark and Doug even lived together for a portion of their college education.

"As the younger brother, I'm sure I annoyed him a lot," Doug said. As time passed, Mark and Doug both found themselves at Charlevoix High School. Mark was working there before Doug, but the two started working together in 2003 when Doug was hired. Today, Doug lives just up the road from his brother, Mark.

"My brother makes me a better person; in the halls he is so cheerful. He makes everyone happy, including myself," Doug said with a smile.

"Some days I get to see him, some days I don't. When I do, he has wise words of wisdom, and sometimes suggestions for my hairstyle. He is very excited about life, and it's contagious," Mark said.

ONE. Pointing to the lesson plan, senora Jennifer Glass is hard at work with Spanish II. Aside from this, she taught Spanish classes I, III, IV & IV as well as Leadership. She also was the student council adviser. TWO. Showing his Geometry class an example problem, Mr. Scott Veurink keeps students thinking. In addition to Geometry, Veurink taught Honors Physics and 8th grade math. THREE. Cleaning up the cafeteria, custodian Mr. Tom Eggers takes care of the floors after lunch. Mr. Eggers had been the custodian for Charlevoix for 25 years. On top of being a custodian, Mr. Eggers also a musician. "I play guitar mainly and once in a while I play mandolin," Eggers said. FOUR. Showing sophomore Adam Hybl how to drop an egg from the balcony without cracking, Mrs. Burmeister explains to them the gravity of how to drop an egg without it breaking. Mrs. Kristine Burmeister is physical science teacher, and is also the Zonta advisor and co-student council advisor.

by Tyvin Whittaker

When a student has a problem, they ask their teacher or parents. When a teacher needs help or has to get something done they ask the principal. When the principle need help or a favor getting sometime done they ask someone too, but they don't ask their parents.

Stamp it, sign it, send it. Find them, tell them, send them. Talk, walk, and work. Day in and day out these are just some of the many tasks Mrs. Cherie Helm has been doing with shrewd efficiency since 2003; yet in the fall of 2017 there will be a new person working her position.

The year is 2003.The Charlevoix High School is entering it's second year, but for Helm it will be the first year as a new office attendant. She will go on to work for the next 13 years; she will witness the coming and going of new teachers, the dramatic entry of new superintendents, and the quiet disappearance of the ones who simply didn't work out.

Of the retiring and sad farewell of the old ones, she will witness the end of the middle school and the transformation into a Middle/High-School, but now her time at Charlevoix is coming to an end.

"I just love the kids. I absolutely love, love the kids. They're all my kids," Helm said.

Next year she will be in the warm climate of Florida.

"Well I have mixed feelings about retiring. I love this job more then any other job," Helm said.

While quietly reflecting. "But I am excited to be moving to Florida. Especially the warm weather," Helm said.

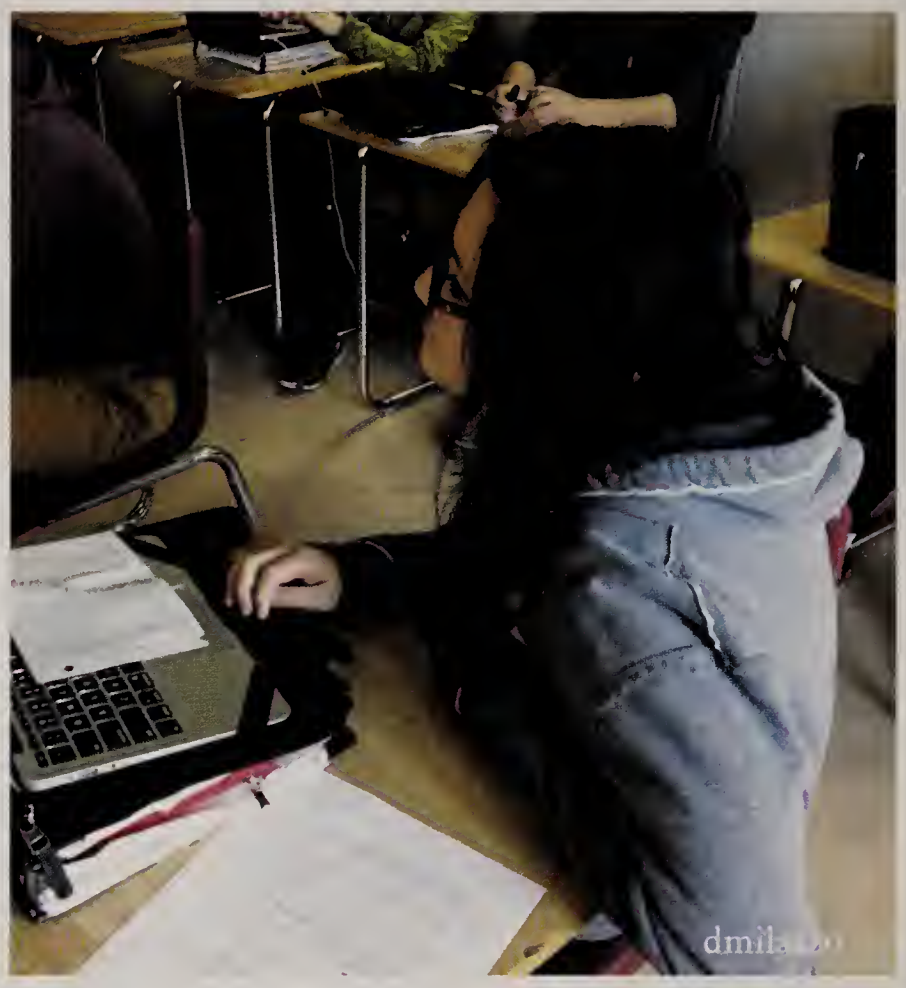
Replacing Mrs. Helm's legacy wont be an easy task, but Helm gave some lighthearted advice.

"I'd tell em you need to be good at multi tasking," Helm chuckled and added. "Also the parents think with their hearts, not their heads..Don't quote me on that one," she said with a laugh.

"But above all I'd say you have to enjoy the controlled chaos," Mrs. Helm said.

"My favorite memory was actually, being the Grand Marshal this year. It was a great honor," Helm said.

legacy, what will you leave?



My legacy:

Outside of school freshman Isabel Bartelli finds herself doing activities such as rock climbing, ice climbing, and scuba diving to name a few.

"I just started whitewater kayaking and that's beyond fun, especially learning all the new techniques. But, I also like climbing and scuba diving a lot. I love mountain biking and skiing, which I've been doing forever. I would have to say they're all my favorite because they all are exciting and just overall fun, you get to see a lot of new cool places and explore in cool different ways," Bartelli said.

Bartelli has been ice climbing for about eight years, starting to rock climb after her second year.

"We always used to tree climb with a slack line and my uncles have always climbed and so we just kind of joined them," Bartelli said.

When not busy with school or climbing, she likes to spend time with her friends.

"We have rad bonfires, make amazingly sarcastic jokes that don't always make sense, like 'bookstores don't sell books' or just yelling 'Barbra' at each other. We watch a range from kid movies to horror movies together. We just love to make fools of ourselves, and were pretty good at it," Bartelli said.

My legacy:

Being good at soccer isn't the only thing special about freshman Riley Smith. She is an artist at heart.

"I started taking art classes last year in 8th grade," Smith said.

Smith started doing it in kindergarten and has been doing it ever since.

"I started doing it in kindergarten in Boyne and I've been doing it ever since," Smith said.

Smith enjoys having it and considers it a hobby of hers.

"I really like it," said Smith

Smith enjoys to draw people and other characters.

"I enjoy drawing people and characters because you can add detail and make characters up," Smith said.

Although Riley enjoys having it as her hobby, she would not want it to be a big part of her future such as her job.

"I would not like it to be my career I just really like it," Smith said.

Riley is very artistic and has a lot of fun in art club.

Q: What is your favorite thing to do outside of school?
A: My favorite thing to do outside of school is sleep, duh.

Q: What would you say is your favorite class?
A: My favorite class would be Spanish because it's fun to explore new languages and cultures.

Q: What is your favorite thing about going to school in Charlevoix?
A: Most of my friends are there and I like the track team people.

Your Words:

What was the last thing that surprised you?

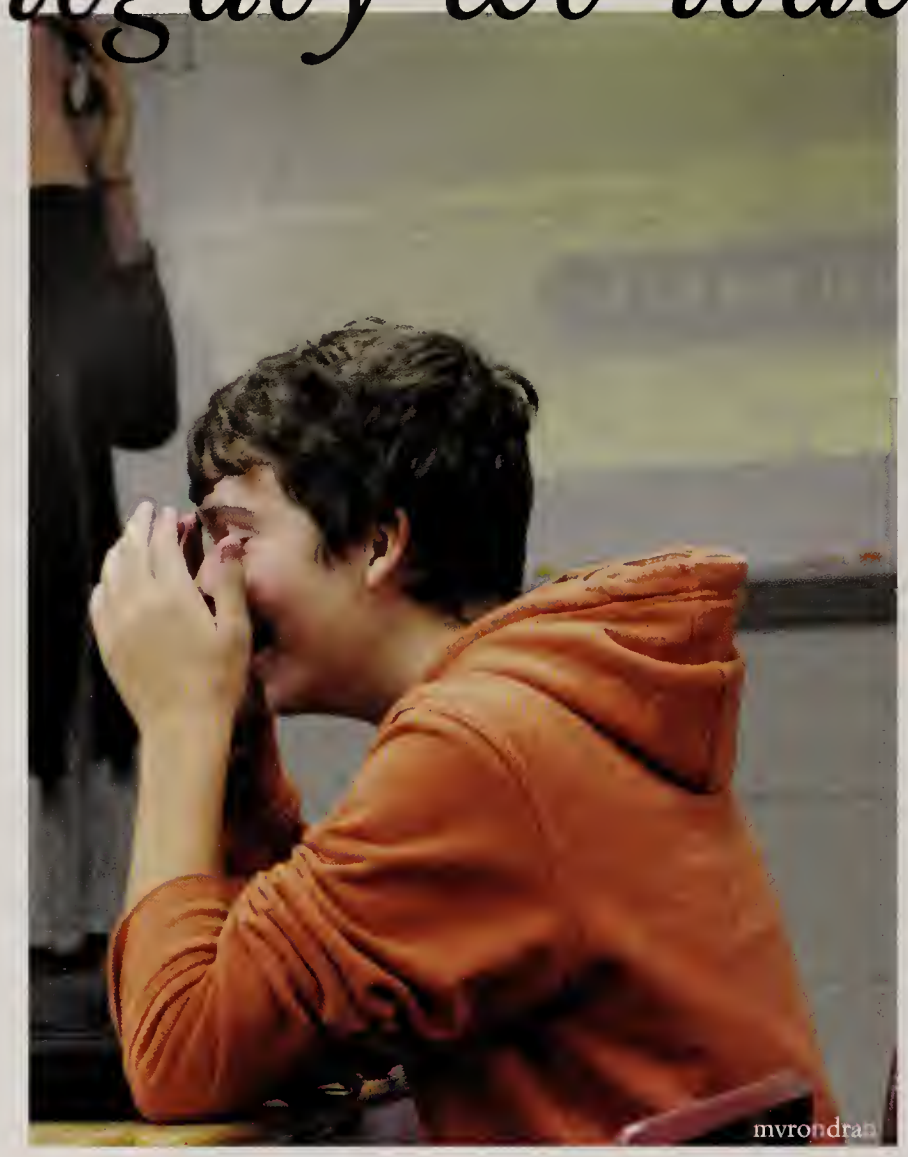
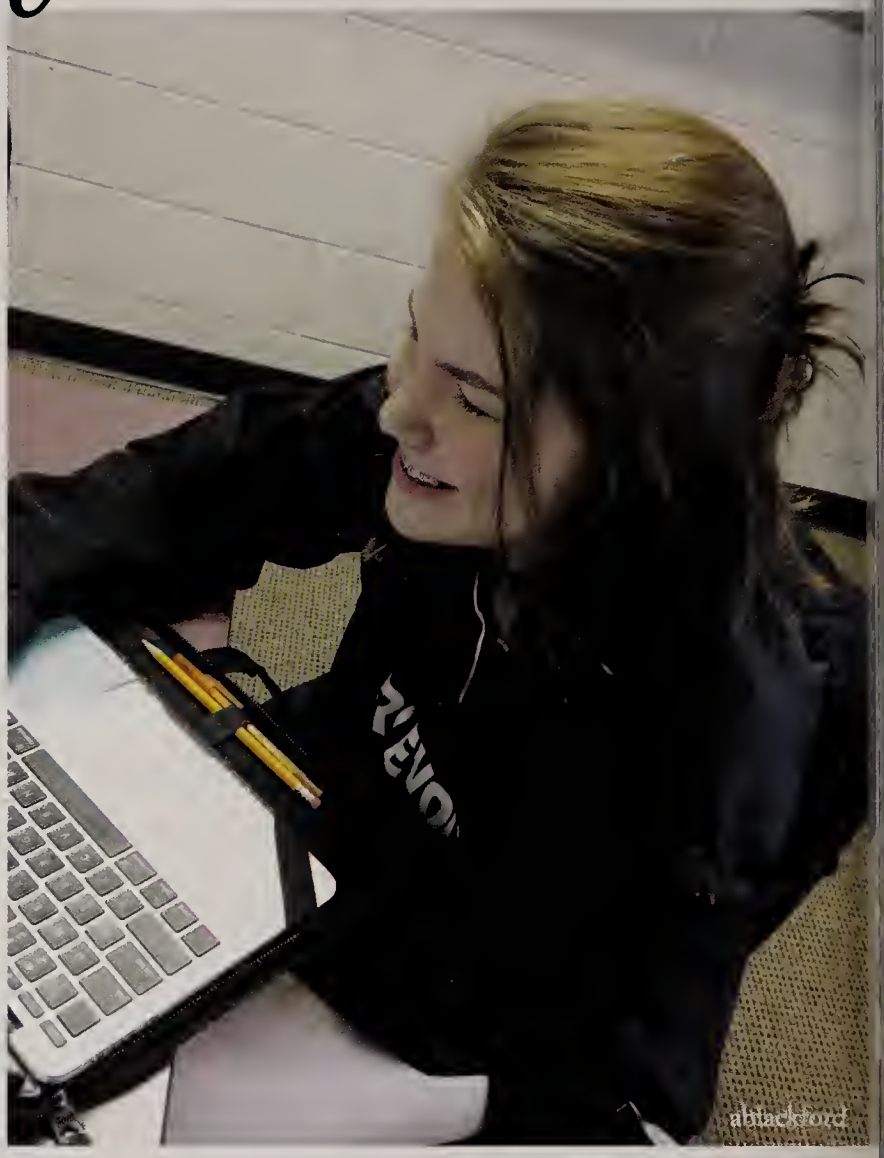
the legacy we leave





Everyone needs a good friend, and freshman Raymond (Austin) Swidorski is hoping to be a friend to anyone who needs one.

"I want to be known for being everyone's friend," Swidorski said. According to Abigail Cunningham he is.

"He's always smiling at saying hi to you in the hallway. He definitely tries to be everyone's friend," Cunningham said .

When it comes to friends, Swidorski believes there is no limits or requirements.

"Why limit yourself to one close friend, when you can have multiple diverse friends?" he said. "I definitely do," he said with a laugh.

Margaret Drost, a friend of Austin's, said "to sum it up Austin is perky, positive, and energetic." After hearing that, Austin said that he is grateful for all the support he gets from his friends

"I'm glad that people have my back, it definitely makes me feel good about myself," Swidorski said.

When you want a bad pun, who is your go-to pun person?

Freshman Danielle Milazzo wants to be that person.

"I want to remember for my bad puns, mainly so that people think I'm funny and not cold-hearted," Milazzo jokes.

"Dani is hilarious when she wants to be," senior Allex Smith said.

Milazzo even had a joke on standby, "How did the farmer find his wife? He tractor down!" she chuckled.

Hearing this joke, junior, Bac Milan said, "Wow. I guess she is just another freshman."

"If I'm being honest, I don't think I'm even that funny. I'm just sarcastic in a mean type of way," Milazzo said.

Milazzo said that if she was known as an overall fun and outgoing person, she would be happy.

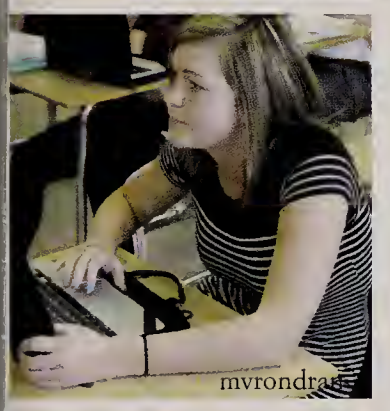
Charlevoix is beautiful because...

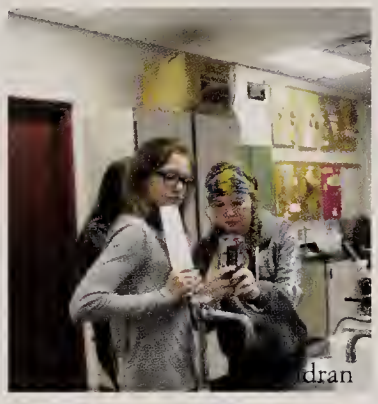
"Charlevoix is beautiful because everyone knows everyone. It's just a great city with citizens that care about their community."
- Caitrin Martin



"Charlevoix is beautiful because of all the lakes all over Charlevoix, and also Charlevoix is beautiful because the petunias make the streets look super safe and happy."
- Kirsten Wagner

"I would say Charlevoix is beautiful because unlike most schools, there isn't much violence or bullying. It's kind of a unique place in that sort of way."
- Olivia McLenon

My class is special because...



"Our class is small but mighty as the smallest class in the school. We work hard together, and always get things done because we are all really close."
- Makayla Clees

"We have a really small class, and I guess that makes us closer than the other classes."
- Gavriel LaCroix

"We're not special at all..."
- Seth Migda

Your Words:

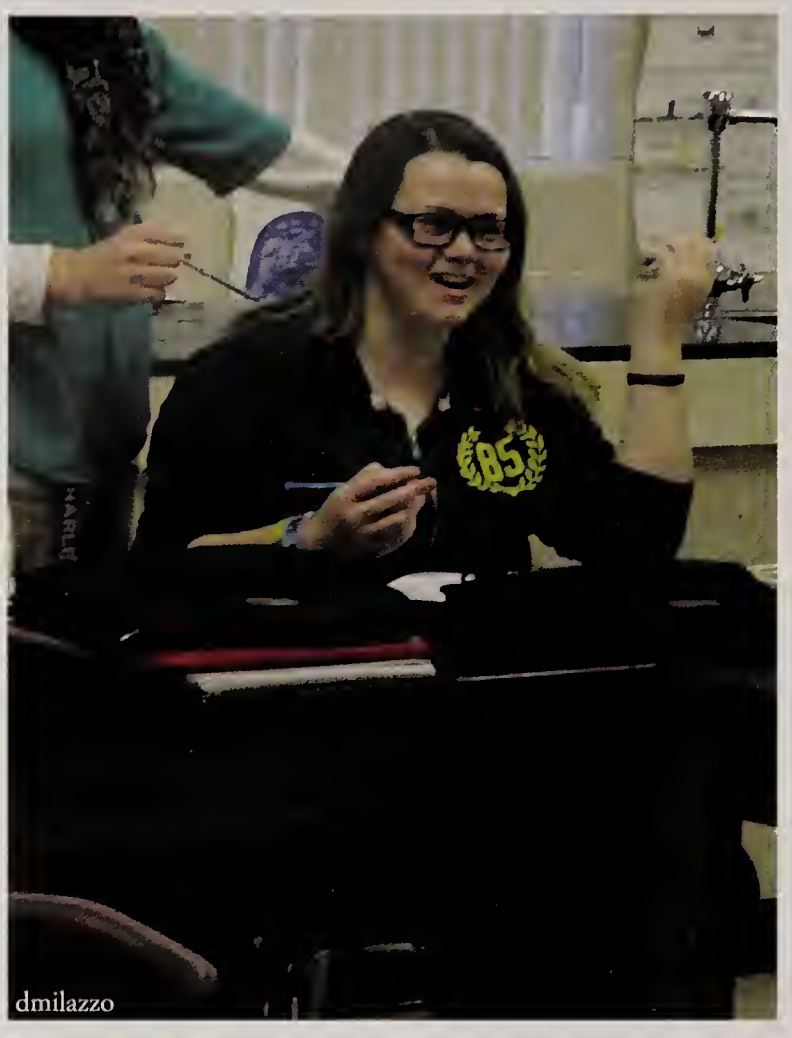
Are you a morning or night person, why?

"A morning person for sure, because I like having coffee with my parents in the morning. we watch the news."
- Margaret Drost

"Night person, I like staying up late and looking up at the stars"
- Sydney Martin

"I'm more of a night person because I like to stay up late."
- Eric Agami

legacy, what would you leave?



My legacy:

"If I could leave any legacy, it would be that I made people laugh. If I can make people laugh and make them happy when they are stressed about school work or social problems that occur in every high school that would be amazing because it'd mean that I have succeeded. So I'd wanna leave behind the legacy of laughter and happiness."
-Kiara Darling

"I would say my legacy is that no matter how defeated I've been, I've always tried to work to be better than my former self."
-Eric Smith

"My legacy is to leave behind a positive attitude with all my classmates and teachers."
-Thomas Rudolph

My legacy:

"I think the legacy I want to leave behind is that when I graduate, I want people to remember me as someone who is always positive and willing to help out others when they need it. I want to be remembered as a happy dude."
-Braeden Richards

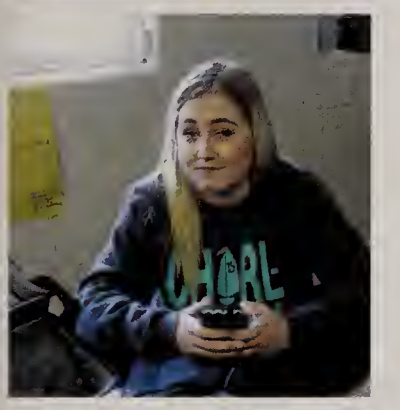
"My legacy would be to be remembered for my hard work in athletics and always being a friend for other people."
-Hannah Soloman

"My legacy is being 6'2 and cooler than you."
-Ellie Louiselle

If you could change one thing about school, what would it be?

"Bring back the backpacks."
-Tylan Fry

"I would have it so we can have backpacks again, so I don't have to go to my locker between every class."
-Jaden Pearsall



"The one thing that I would change about school is that we should have a break during the middle of school to go outside and stretch and just have time to relax."
-Aysia Hoffman

"Give people less homework."
-Jaidyn Brooks

"I would change that the school should offer just regular pop and not diet pop."
-Zach Dixon

"If I could change one thing about school, it would be the time. Kids our age shouldn't have to wake up at 6 or 7 in the morning to catch the bus because they don't have a ride or try to get there on time when they live all the way across town."
-Angelina Hudson

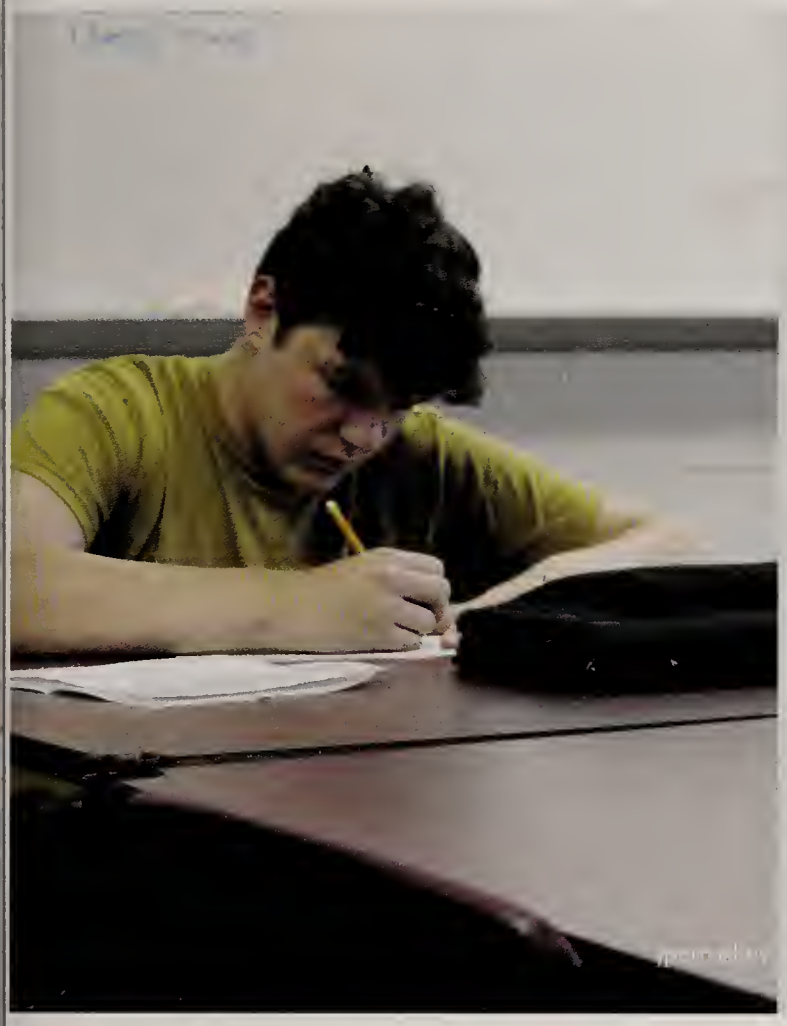
legacy, what will you leave?



My legacy: Maximus Hinkle

"I have four classes with Max, and every day he asks to use the bathroom," sophomore Kiley Mann said when asked what Hinkle's legacy should be.

Maximus Hinkle tries to defend himself by saying, "I drink a lot of water... plus it helps pass time in class."

"Being the youngest in my family, my brother would say I am annoying," Hinkle said. "That is only because I beat him up"

Other than beating- up his brother, Hinkle said that he likes to ride his 16 year-old electric blue 2005 cauit drive moped that can go 33 MPH. He also said that the Yamaha Zuma is not on his favorite list what so ever.

"Since I play multiple sports, a lot of the time I do not turn things in on time. I play catch up all year. Right now I am all caught up."

"My goals for the rest high school is to pass final exams every year."

My legacy: Kiley Mann

"When ever I go home, I think of the extra work I choose to put in, for band, as well as a lot of other homework. I give it the same amount of effort to band that I would put into my math homework," sophomore Kiley Mann said.

Mann plays French Horn for the Charlevoix High School symphonic band as well as the snare drum for the Charlevoix High School Marching Band.

"Sometimes, band does require a bit more attention than other classes because the band is a team, and you can't let the team down by not working as hard as the others."

With doing so much in band and school, Mann does not get a lot of free time.

"On a Saturday afternoon, I will probably be reading or painting. Super crazy, right?"

"My weekends tend to be pretty busy because I like to get out and about, and I do not get a lot of time to spend with my friends or with myself during the week. But, I also like to stay at home and do my own thing. You've got to find that healthy balance."

Movie making in progress

Junior Della Burnett is not doing the typical kind of sport, that you would think of. She likes YouTube.

She dedicates most of her time to loving the content and editing of Youtube videos.

"I like the different kinds of editing you can find in Youtube's videos," Burnett said.

Burnett once tried her own skills with editing videos and uploading them to Youtube, although she eventually had to take them down, cause her mom would not allow her to have it up.

"I'm not good at it, but I like it. I want a career that involves film making," Burnett said.

Producing movies is something Burnett wants to do as a career, film production is something she eventually wants to try out as well.

She spends a lot of her time during the day watching videos of the teen idol and superstar, Shawn Mendes, who seems to be the main inspiration behind her future career.

Bac: the traveling man

Junior Bac Milan, loves traveling.

Milan has visited a total of twenty countries, and lived in five.

"I would rather have traveling as a hobby, and not a career," Milan said.

According to Milan, having to travel as a part of your job would limit your abilities to explore the culture.

"When you are traveling for your job, you don't get to experience the culture as much as if you went for vacation," Milan said.

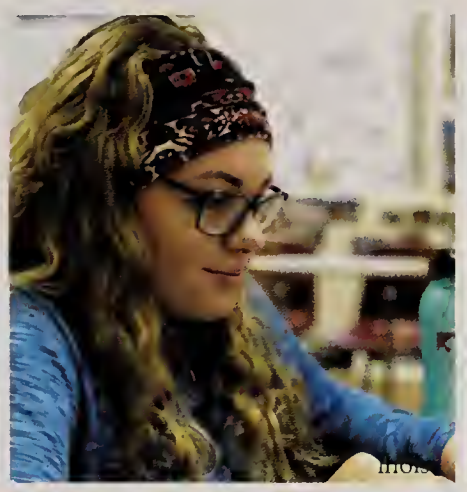
Milan wants to stay in the United States, but still be able to travel and get to experience more kinds of cultures than he already has.

Milan was born in Hanoi, Vietnam. After being adopted from Vietnam when he was six months old, he moved to Syria for two years. After that, he lived in Arizona for eight years, China for four years, Egypt for four months, and then to Charlevoix, Michigan.

How are you enjoying your junior year?

Larissa Vrondran
"I enjoy going to gym class everyday and play Mr. Doug Drenth's games, which he made up in his basement."

Autumn Paczesny
"I really like pottery and Mr. John Guirey. He has definitely made Charlevoix have a good impression on me."



Madison Olach
"Junior year is more fun, because now I am able to drive to school everyday."

Emily Shrift
"Junior year is way harder than everyone says it is, but I can feel myself actually learning and preparing for the future. Also, every day is a day closer to zoomin' out of here, so that's pretty cool."

My legacy: Spencer Haan

Your last year of high school is very near, how would you like to change from your junior year to your senior year?

"Honestly, I really hope that I can get myself to stop procrastinating as much as I currently do." "I know a lot of seniors slack off in the last year of high school, and I'd really like to be different then that."

They Say:
"Hard worker, great work ethic and character," Mr. Tom Schultz said.
"One of our best students, a real role model, " PE teacher Mark Drenth said.

My legacy: Olivia Jeakle

You participate in a lot sports and maintain a 4.0, what's your advice to incoming freshmen looking to do the same?
"Well, my advice would be to carefully plan out your week and have a checklist of all that you have to do. Don't procrastinate and don't slack. It's really not that hard to do," Jeakle said.

They Say:
"She is a very driven student," teacher Mrs. Karen Peterson said. "Last August, I caught her going to the store and buying supplies for the lip sync so her class could get a jump-start; it really shows you her character."
she said.

leaving my legacy

My legacy: Megan Romano

Throughout Megan's high school career she has focused on living life to the fullest and being true to herself. Megan wants her legacy to be to, "to do high school your own way and not what others say it has to be." Megan feels like she accomplished this by "being true to herself, kind to others; being athletic without being in a high school sport, working hard to get good grades and not letting Charlevoix High School be the highlight of my teenage years." Megan plans on going to Ferris State University, but is indecisive on what she wants her future career to be.

In her free time she enjoys Crossfit, SUPing (stand up paddle boarding) and cooking.

Megan said, "I love crossfit because it is physically and mentally hard. I love the challenge that comes along with every work out. SUPing is the best way for me to relax and it is very peaceful paddling out in the middle of Lake Michigan. Cooking has been a part of my family for a while so it just comes naturally for me. Some of my best memories are from cooking and eating amazing food."

My legacy: Miranda Stieglitz

Miranda Steigletz is a hard working student and someone who is very passionate about music. She is a class role model and wants to leave her legacy behind as someone who was a part of infinity faith worship band and having a passion for music.

Miranda has been a part of the high school band throughout her whole high school career playing the saxophone. She also sings and plays the piano for infinity faith. She has participated in many events through infinity faith including performing on a venetian parade float. Miranda is an outgoing and very lively person. Shes not afraid to speak out loud and always make people laugh.

Miranda wants her legacy to be known as, "the girl who always had a smile on her face and laughed like no tomorrow."

Miranda said, "I want to be able to use my artistic ability in my future."

She wants to be a school teacher some day because she enjoys helping others and improving others lives. Miranda also is a hard working member of National Honors Society. Miranda is very organized and works hard in every class. She keeps track of her grades and performs at her best ability every day.

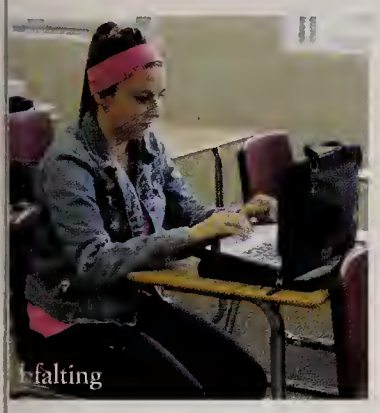
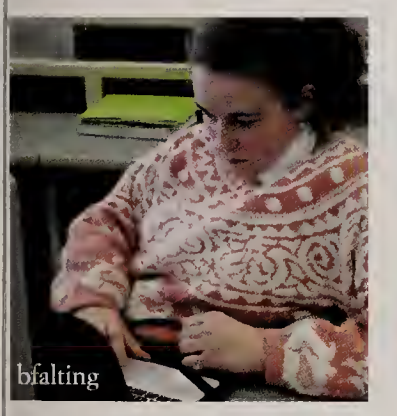
How do you prepare for a summative?

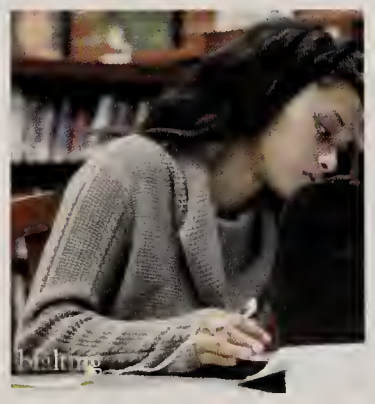


Focusing and typing away on her MacBook Shae Bosley said, "I try and study as much as I can, but if I can't study the night before, I'll try studying before the class during school."

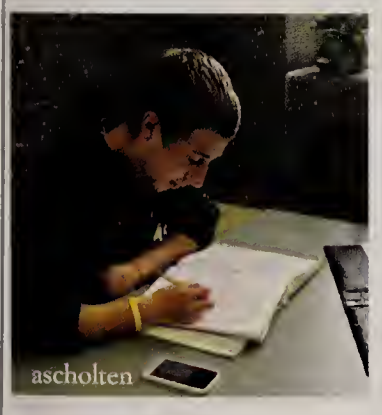
Sketching a drawing in Mr. John Guirey's Advanced art class Luke Telgonholf said, "most of the time I wing tests, but when I do study, I look over the review sheet and split up the things I do and don't know."



Working on an assignment from Mrs. Jill Erskine, Beth Veenstra said, "I make sure I'm confident with the material before moving on to the next subject in class. I ask questions, paying attention and do my homework so when it comes to test time I'm prepared and ready to go."



Working hard in the media center Mikaya Dixon said the way she likes to study is making flashcards on quizlet and looking over the review sheet given repeatedly.



Trying to solve a math equations, Brenden Russell says, "I'm not a fan of studying for tests, but if I do I will glance at the view sheet."

a legacy for the better

My legacy:

While some fear change, senior Allex Smith embraces it. All throughout high school Smith has spent time working out and trying to improve his body for the better.

"My legacy would be to change because I have changed so much in my life already. I lost 65 pounds and I came out," Smith said.

Smith has hopes to be able to change other people in the future.

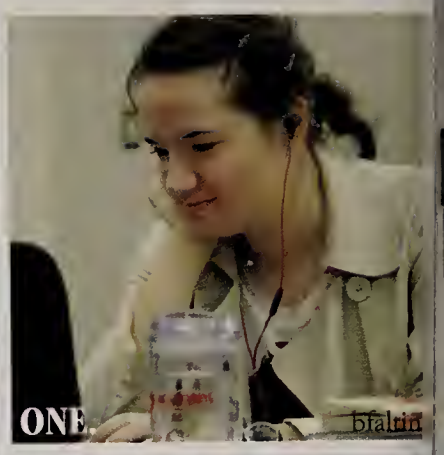
"My legacy inspires other because it shows others that no matter where you come from or where you start you can change if you work hard enough," Smith said.

"It'll help me in the future because since I've already gone through it. I will know in the future how to change for the better. I am ready for any changes that need to happen," Smith said.

Many people have contributed to Smith's ambitions and inspiration to change.

"My dad and grandpa have inspired me because my dad is in the military and he taught me the value of hard work and discipline. Beyonce's music inspired me to motivate myself," Smith said.

Going up to shoot a basket, senior Allex Smith attempts to score for the game lightning, a game where the seniors won. "The game was fun and very team orientated." Smith said.



ONE. Smirking in class, senior Isabelle Buday searches the internet while listening to music. "I love listening to music during school because it helps me focus and study well," Buday said. TWO. Performing a scene from High School Musical, seniors Christian Matye and Collin Turkelson lip sync. "It's hard work but it is fun," Matye said. THREE. Side by side in art, seniors Sabrina Hosler and Luke Telgenhof chat it up. "Art class is fun because I can make what I want," Telgenhof said. FOUR. Patiently sitting, senior Nichole Hart waits for the ceremony to continue. "My favorite thing about inducting someone was getting to induct one of my best friends Kenzi Cunningham," Hart said.

leaving my legacy

Hello my name is Kevin Archambault. When I started here at Charlevoix High School I was a quiet kid with a very small group of friends. For the most part I stayed home on the weekends, on weekdays I rushed to get home, and I had a hard time socializing in school because I was very shy.

It wasn't until junior year that I decided that I was done being just "that kid" so I stepped out of my comfort zone, made more friends, started lifting weights to become more confident, and it has all changed my life forever.

In my first two years at this school I did barely anything and just kind of hid behind the curtains, but in these past two years I have done everything I can to be involved in our school and community. I realized that If there is something you are interested in why shouldn't you go out, try your hardest, and make sure you always put 100% into it which is exactly what I did.

Now of course I'm not the best athlete, best musician, or best student, but I know that I have tried my hardest in everything I do, and I am happy with what I have accomplished. A big part of high school is knowing that you should not care what others think of you, let them judge you for doing what you want because in the end you are the one that's winning. Over the past two years I have won the Louie Armstrong Jazz Band award, been picked as a People's Choice award winner, and even won homecoming king.

What I have realized in my high school career is that you are not going to be the best at everything, but everyone is different in their own unique way and you have to understand that, if you want to do something don't hesitate, don't think twice and just go for it. Don't do it for anyone else do it for yourself.

My legacy is to always try new things, talk to new people, step out of your comfort zone, and do what you're interested in no matter what people think because you never know how things might work out for you.

breaking new ground

by Tyvin Whittaker

Recently the Rayder Nation has proved successful in claiming regional titles in basketball, baseball, and cross country, yet one sport has eluded the Rayders the coveted title for a long time, - its entire existence in fact - without a single boy's soccer regional title. Yet on Oct. 27, after 56,656 days, 155 years of going without the title, the boys changed history and ushered in a new Legacy of Rayder Nation sports.

It almost didn't happen that way.

Rewind three games where the Rayders were down 3-2 with 60 seconds on the clock.

"All hope seemed to be lost," junior Bac Milan said.

"Defeat seemed inevitable." Not for everyone one player had it in his mind and in his heart that the Rayders were going to be victorious that day. This player still had a few tricks up his sleeve. With less than 60 seconds to go, senior Christian Matye scored a goal to tie the Rayders with the Elks; however, the team wasn't done yet.

Senior Kevin Pearl pulled through for the Rayders and scored yet another goal to lead the Rayders to victory.

" I knew it was now or never," Christian Matye said, "And I decided now was the better option."

The regional victory was one of only one of the achievements accomplished by the Rayders in 2016. The Rayders only lost three games out of the total 27 they played, It was a senior heavy team with over 16 seniors compared to the eight underclassmen.

"The team this year worked well together overall and really came together when needed," coach Boss said,

"The major hurdles to overcome when you have a team with this much skill is becoming over confident and thinking victories and goals will just come to your team. We learned an early lesson on this, and grew from that," Boss said.

The tenacity that every player shared on the field would eventually lead the Rayders to regional victory and leave senior Christian Matye as the second highest scoring Rayder of all time. Don't be fooled, he couldn't of done it alone. #11 senior forward Noah Carson would contribute 32 goals and 17 assists throughout the season followed by fellow #3 senior Nicholas Bradley who had an impressive 20 assists and 15 goals. "These boys have proved what it means to be a Rayder," coach John Boss said. They never gave up and never had a bad attitude. They gave it their all," Their "All" proved to be a force to reckon with.

one team

by Benjamin Peterson

The Petoskey Invitational course could be described as lonely. After the first half, mile runners were on their own. So, for more than two miles it was the athlete and the corn field.

"I PR'd that race by a minute," junior Kenzi Cunningham said.

Although the isolation didn't stop the Rayders from personal bests. Many PR's and SB's were ran on the course.

"I had just gotten home from Boston, and I did not feel ready for a race, my legs were tight, and I ran two miles alone during the race, but I still managed to run a season best," senior Lukila Witthoeft said.

Regionals gave all team members another great race. At Benzie Central the course was flat and fast.

"It was a different mentality you needed to come into it, you needed to stay positive because it was fast," Cunningham said.

Combining a fast, flat course made the a success and jettisoned each team to secure a place at the state meet on Nov. 5.

Big team contributers and standouts were freshman Benjamin Lentz and Emma Wachler. Wachler, in her first cross season, took off over six minutes running a time of 19:49. Lentz, in his first season, took off over two minutes in two months running 17:43.

Other than Lentz and Wachler, the team improved immensely from 2015, with everyone on the team improving by a minute or more throughout the season.

"Next year is going to be a tough year considering we are losing our top three best guys. But we have a strong team and we will make up for them," Lentz said.

Running side by side. junior Kenzi Cunningham cooks next to her teammate senior Lukila Witthoeft. "The course was very lonely after Lukila and I parted," Cunningham said.

ONE. With 100 meters to go, junior Benjamin Peterson kicks it in. "My season went a lot better than last year," Peterson said. Peterson finished in 18:10. TWO. Running in the home meet, sophomore Kaitlin Schwenke stays tough. Schwenke improved throughout the season and PR'd in her last race of the season at Benzie Central PROM in 20:55. THREE. Running with her teammate, freshman Ella Gaffney goes through the course. "I liked the two mile home course because it started at a uphill, and going down the downhill gave you a boost," Gaffney said.
FOUR. Running through the swamp, freshman Makayla Clees defeats the course. "The course was easy and we knew it," Clees said.

what is your legacy?

I'm leaving this cross season with the knowledge of doing it for yourself, while being a teammate and having fun.
-Junior Grace Way

One race I just decided to remove the limits I had set on myself, and I turned into "The Tank." I would like to pass that on to anyone else that thinks they can't be better than others.

Academic All State

The Rayder boy's and girl's varsity teams ended the season on a high note. Earning academic all state as a team, with Isabel Hess, Michelle Bollini, Rachel Nesburg, and Noah Carson earning academic all state individually. "It was very cool to be recognized for our academics," junior Michelle Bollini said.

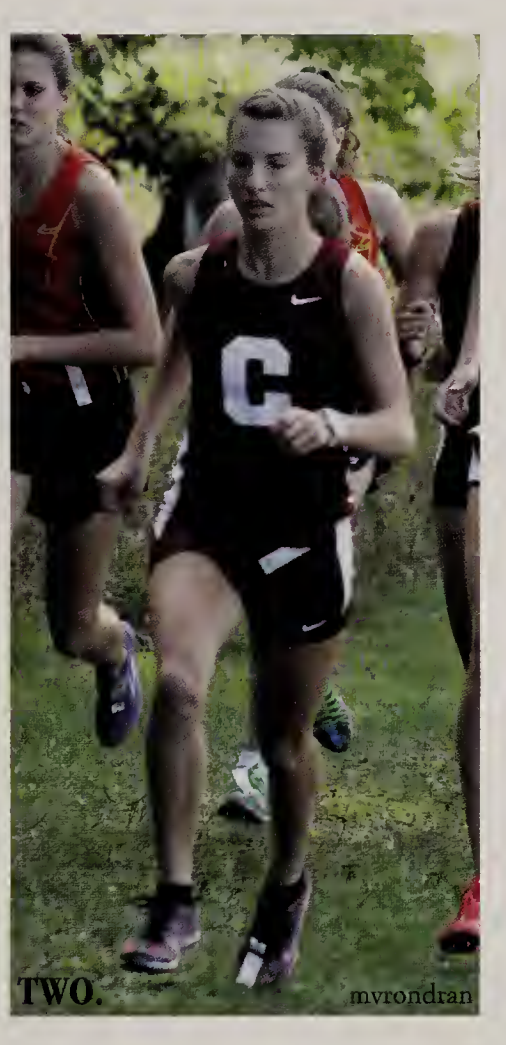
ONE. Running through the Gaylord course, senior Luke Buday breaks his PR by running 16:57. Buday said, "I'm happy my senior year season is here, because I've been looking forward to racing again for awhile." TWO. Charging through the Gaylord course, senior Noah Carson flies to the finish. "I'm going to miss cross and being part of a team that I have been a part of my whole life," Carson said. THREE. Powering up a hill, junior Anna Zahner gets her season best time in Carson City by running 21:48. Zahner said, "This was the first year I ran cross country with coach Drenth, and I'm really looking forward to running next year with him because he's such a cool guy." FOUR. Sprinting past opponents, senior David Ritter fights to the finish. "It felt good to lead the race for the first mile, until the legs gave out; it still felt amazing though," Ritter said. Ritter broke his PR by running 17:13. FIVE. Side by side running through the course, sophomore Isabella Witthoeft and senior Bree Farmer work to finish it together. Witthoeft said, "Bree and I work together through every obstacle, and I'll be lonely without her next season." SIX. Taking it easy, junior Camden Musilek throws up a peace sign. "I loved the team experience that cross country brought about, but was disappointed that it was cut short by my fainting problem," Musilek said.

Q: How has running with a pal impacted you?
A: "I'm just glad my busted knee hasn't inhibited me from running along side my best friend, Lukila." -Junior Rachel Nesburg

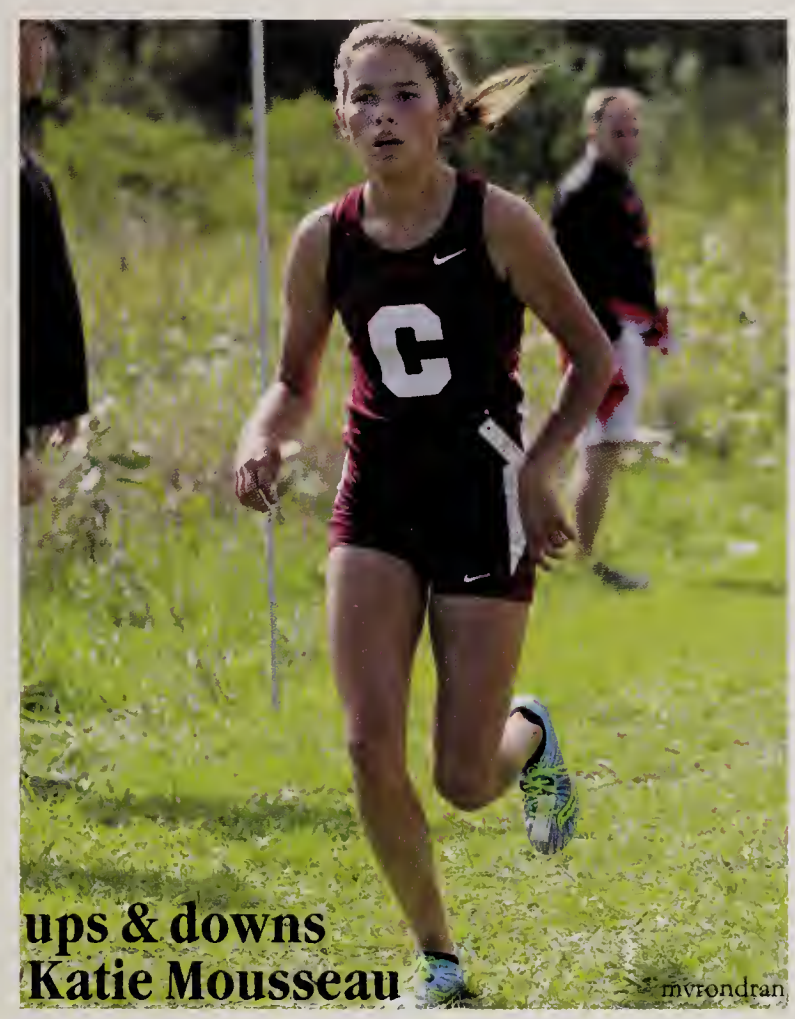
Q: What's your favorite memory of the season?
A: "Definitely when we were on the way from the Michigan State meet and Kenzi asked if we were on the freeway when we were driving down a highway in East Jordan going at least 20-30 mph slower than you would on a freeway." -Junior Josh Carlson

Q: How do you get motivated in a race?
A: "My teammates yell for me when people start catching up to me, so I start rippin', and they can't keep up." --Junior Caleb Kenwabiskis said.

Q: What do you tell yourself during races?
A: "I just tell myself I need to stick and catch one more person ahead of me." - Senior Isabel Hess said.



ONE. Side by side, junior Natalie Nesburg and freshman Emma Buday run through the last mile of the Mud Run. "I really enjoy running with Emma Buday because we both push each other to do our best," Nesburg said. TWO. Leading the pack, junior Michlle Bollini tries to increase her lead. Bollini explained, "The team has progressed throughout the season, we set goals for ourselves and worked harder towards them everyday. We ran our butts off and proved that Charlevoix can complete with the top teams in the state." THREE. On her way to the finish line, sophomore Jayden Brooks, gives it her all. Brooks said, "The season went better for me because I ran more outside of practice."



ups & downs
Katie Mousseau

This season in cross country overall was filled with many ups and downs for me. The first meet of the season was a success and was filled with many promises for the season, but unfortunately that wasn't exactly how it ended up going. My mental game just didn't seem to be in it as much as it had the previous year. The varsity team was much more competitive this year, no doubt. After the conference meet it was a wake up call for me. I've spent every season since my freshmen year trying to break 22 and run in the 21's and it finally happened at the race that could've been my last forever. I'm sad that after seven years of running cross country competitively that it has come to an end.

JV Boy's Football: Lead by head coach Kenny Provost, the team went 7-2. The thing that helped the boys have a great season was "practicing hard, playing as a cohesive unit, and overcoming adversity," asst. coach Nick Vuillemont said.

Even though the boys won seven games they still lost two games.

"Making proper in-game adjustments, minimizing mistakes/limiting turnovers," asst. coach Nick Vuillemnont said.

Since the boys made some adjustments during the game to help them win they became a stronger team.

"Our team played very well and didn't play down to other teams levels," freshman Alan Ritter said.

Girl's Golf:

"We played in seven invitations and placed 1st one time, second five times and third place one time. We placed second at Regionals and made it to State Finals. We placed 17th in the State Division IV out of 67 schools," coach Jennifer Sell said.

This year is the last year that the girl's golf team will be a club. Starting next year they will actually be a team.

"This year was phenomenal. We shot our blub 'best' low score and made it to State Finals after only having a team for 3 years. I am so incredibly proud of the girls," coach Jennifer Sell said.

In addition, the club qualified for the state tournament. According to junior Abbey Scholten, it was a challenge, but a good experience.

"It is hard to stay focused when golfing, because a match is over such an extended period of time, but I try to focus on what my swing for each shot and where I would want to hit the ball," junior Olivia Jeakle said. Jeakle's best score was 106. TWO. Focusing on her shot sophomore Rylynn Sladek hits the ball hoping it goes where she wants. "Every day is a new adventure. You never know if you're going to have a good day or bad day," Sladek said. THREE. While swinging, sophomore Maddilyne Lee is focused and staying calm. "One thing that keeps me focused on my game is to just keep calm and don't worry about my score or bad shots," Lee said. FOUR. Tackling his player freshman #11 Jacob Snyder, "I felt upset cause he caught it for a touchdown," Snyder said. Although the JV boys won 27-19 against Glen Lake. FIVE. Sophomore #12 Tylan Fry runs the ball he gets the ball closer to the end zone helping his team beat Elk Rapids 40-0. "We wouldn't be able to accomplish anything without anyone of the 11 guys on the field," Fry said. SIX. As freshman #44 Tyler Ostrum takes his three point stance on offense playing fullback he gets ready to split between power running and blocking against opponent, Elk Rapids. Ostrum helped lead his team to a 41-0 victory. "Overall, I did good, because I am a small person playing on offense of line, and I was controlling the person in front of me pretty good," Ostrum said. SEVEN. After freshman #5 Cole Wright passes the ball to #21 Alan Ritter, Wright has an assisted touchdown. "We ran a play action pass, and we got a touchdown to Alan," Wright said. EIGHT. As senior Emily Sabsook ends her last year golfing for the girl's golf team, Sabsook had her best score of an 89. "It's such a complex sport, and I feel really good when I go out and play," Sabsook said.

Although the girls had a great season, it wasn't just practice. The girls found a snake (which came sort of a team mascot) and they had an 80s party. The girls showed that both having fun and working hard is not only possible, but it also pays off.

"We were walking to the driving range and I noticed that there was a cute little snake just slithering around on the ground," Snabes said.

"With all the offensive threats we had, Jared [McLean] had a fine season offensively," coach Ron Bindi said.

McLean had always been a strong football player. Through young ages he began playing football, but coming into his double digits he began to play soccer too. McLean's strengths were his supreme speed and overall strength. Since he was stronger and faster than a lot of kids his age, he excelled in both sports.

"I always knew I was a great runner, but I never thought we would make it this far as a team. I'm glad to have had such a winning season," Jared McLean said.

With McLean's help, the team excelled, making it all the way to the state playoffs for the first time in over a decade.

They started off this season winning every game until about halfway through their season when they were defeated by Glen Lake (49-7).

After overcoming the loss, the Rayders continued on with their winning season by traveling to Negunee where they were sadly defeated (28-7).

"We made not have made it all the way, but we definitely made our mark," Caleb Hart said.

Avoiding the tackle, #21 Jared McLean, cruises past Glen Lake as he attempts to lead the Rayders to victory. Unfortunately the Rayders lost to Glen Lake (49-7).

Huddle Up Rayders!

The team had very many goals that were met for the season. One of the biggest was that they had beaten Boyne City, one of the schools biggest rivalry. "This was a big accomplishment for our team," player #20 Camden Alden said. The team also made the state playoffs, but unfortunately could not win with a score of 28-7.

Some other goals that the team made this season were winning the county, and having All State players. #30 Bradley Klinger was 1st TEAM defensive back Detroit Free Press, second TEAM Assosiated Press, and Jared McClean was an honorable mention, All State Free Press.

ONE. Attempting to avoid the tackle is #20 Camden Alden. The team was defeated by Glen Lake 49-7. TWO. Looking onto the field, senior #71 Jacob Mitchell tries to break the defensive line of Mancelona. Mitchell played varsity football for four years. "I have played football ever since I can remember. My dad and both my brothers were great football players, so I was happy to carry on the legacy," Mitchell said. THREE. Blocking on the offensive line, senior #66 Caleb Hart stops the opposing team from crossing the line of scrimmage. As Caleb Hart stops the line, senior #11 Malcom Williams breaks through the middle of the line to score a Rayder touchdoown. FOUR. Hiking the ball, junior #75 Jacob Cox prepares to block for the offensive line after the ball leaves his hands. After the ball was hiked, the ball went into the hands of quarterback #2, Bradley Klinger in hopes of gaining yards. FIVE. Sprinting past two defenders, #21 Jared McLean is about to encounter another defender from Glen Lake. SIX. Immediately after receiving a pass, a Mancelona receiver is then tackled by two Rayders at the same time. #12 Garrett Seese and #20 Camden Alden simultaneously take down the offender.

JV: " I LOVE THIS TEAM," sophomore Caroline Jarema said. The JV team had a resoundingly strong season, despite losing several players to varsity call-ups and the team moral was accordingly reflected.

"We had a great team chemistry," sophomore Payton Novotny said.

The girls played together on the court and off, sharing a strong bond. Late season heroics seemed to be a pattern amongst the Rayders, with the sophomore team having positive results as "Anglelina Hudson and Megan Streeter both had really strong finishes," sophomore Jaden Pearsall said.

Coach Dawn Hankins was excited that the team was serving at 87 percent all season, a "huge accomplishment."

The girls finished with a solid record and "excitement for the upcoming years," sophomore Megan Streeter said.

Freshmen:"We had a real strong season, a lot of people came on really well near the end, especially Caitrin Martin. She really helped out team out a lot near the end and became a vital part of our team," freshmen Jessica Moulden said.

"Caitrin improved drastically over the course of the year," coach Tara Rabideau said.

Moulden's team finished with a winning record, a "big accomplishment," per freshmen Krista Dorst.

"The girls all did really well, I was not sure how the season was going to go and was quite happy with the results," coach Tara Rabideau said.

Raise your hand if you generally don't smile when running laps, getting up at five thirty am for all day meets, or doing burpies. Everyone should be raising his/her hand. Our lone exception is freshman Krista Dorst. According to her teammates, Dorst is the most upbeat person to ever walk the earth.

"She is always so insanely happy, I don't know how she maintains it," freshman Margaret Drost said.

"It's scary sometimes, her smile has a crazy omnipresence," freshman Abigial Cunningham said.

" We can have just lost the game, and she still has a big smile on her face, and an upbeat demeanor. We look like sad zombies next to her."

setting into the season

by Allex Smith

The team was wise with age and experience, having several seniors and juniors contributing.

"I think that the fact that I've never had this many seniors on a team, a lot of times makes us feel a seniority and determination unlike previous years," coach Audra Randall said.

Although there was an age gap with girls from 9th-12th grade on the team, it did not negatively affect a thing on the court. It actually was a benefit for the team.

The older girls acted as mentors and helped the younger girls and taught them new tips and tricks, like how to throw off the opponent's defense with a quicker offense than freshman or junior varsity level play

The team had many goals and dreams and with hard work and endurance they successfully met many of their goals. Beating Traverse City St. Francis was a big accomplishment because of the long history of losing to them, but they finally overcame the rival.

"For the three years I've been on this team, we've never been able to break them. It feels so good to finally prove it can be done," senior Sarah Moon said.

They also won against ranked teams, including class D state champions, Leland. But perhaps the best accomplishment of all was getting another district win, the team's third consecutive title.

"Going into regionals, the girls came to a realization that it was more than just being on the court and playing, and that it takes the knowledge we've gained throughout the year to get to the next step," coach Audra Randall said.

As she jumps to pass the ball, senior #1 Julia Doskoch tries to save a hit sent deep into the court. Doskoch had a great passion for volleyball and loved the challenge of the libero position. Doskoch was also a great mentor and role model for the younger girls on the team. "I'm so proud of these girls and everything that we've accomplished, and I will miss them so much next year." Doskoch said.

Moon was a devoted team member and has a great passion for the sport. She challenged herself to be the best she could be, not just in volleyball; but in everything that she does.

"Volleyball has always been my favorite sport, and I believe my hard work pays off on the court," Moon said.

"I am thankful that this team has led me to be the player I am today. I am especially excited to play at the college level. I believe this team has pushed me to my full potential and has given me this opportunity to keep playing the sport that we love."

Moon's future plans were to play volleyball at Trine University.

cheering again

by Bac Milan

When most people think about cheerleading the words popular, mean and self centered come to mind. They watch movies like "Bring It On," "All Cheerleaders Die," and "The Hot Chick," where the cheerleaders aka "preps" are walking down the halls in their own little "group."

"A lot of us wouldn't be friends if we weren't in cheerleading," freshman Sydney Martin said. "It helps you step out of your comfort zone and anyone is allowed to do it. We do not think we are better than anyone else nor do we go on diets 24/7. In fact we get three pieces of pizza before a game."

When Martin was younger she was in competitive cheer. She wants to go to college with a cheer program, but she's not sure what her major will be.

The last time Charlevoix had a cheerleading team was in 2010. In 2009 the cheerleaders cheered with the mini cheerleaders, and they did a cheer during the homecoming assembly just like the cheer team now.

The cheerleading coach, Sonia Dorst, had coached professional cheerleading for eight years for the young champions. Her daughter, freshman Krista Dorst, is also the co-captain of the cheerleading team.

"It's a lot more nerve-racking when we cheer at home games rather than away games because you know everyone in the stands. Since this is the first year of cheerleading, the people in the stands don't really know what to do, so we have to get them into it," Krista Dorst said.

Jumping high into the air, freshman Sydney Martin cheers on the Charlevoix varsiy football team against East Jordan during their homecoming game, winning 21-0. "The game was really fun to watch, and I'm happy that the football team won the homecoming game. I loved trying to pump up the crowd."

Cheering on the varsity football team, the cheerleaders watch on as the football team runs through a banner that they had made before the game. "It was a very exciting game to watch and be apart of," junior Savhana Mccullough said. "I really enjoyed being a cheerleader this year. It was a lot of fun and I got to spend time with my friends."

ONE. Dribbling past a defender, junior #20 Grace Way looks for someone to pass the ball to. "So this was the first time playing Elk; we played them four times, and my coach put me as forward after playing mid for the whole game, but I was tired so she put me as a forward for a few minutes and Elks defense was weak. If you sent a ball over their head they couldn't get it. I had a ball sent to me from our goalie, Grayce Sprecksell, and I ran on it. It went over the defenses head and I touched the ball ahead of me to try and score," Way said. TWO. Kicking the ball upfield, sophomore #8 Rylynn Sladek looks for a teammate to pass to. "I was playing defense. Elk had the ball by our goal, so I was trying to pass the ball up the side to one of my teammates," Sladek said.

THREE. Cheering through the cold, the cheerleaders try to pump up the crowd during the Charlevoix homecoming football game. "I was freezing my butt off because it was such a cold night," freshman Margaret Drost said. "We were doing a cheer where we get the crowd involved." FOUR. Beating the defender to the ball, freshman #9 Emmaline Peterson wins the ball from the other team. "It was really hot that day and it was earlier in our season. We were playing Elk Rapids, and we were just learning to work together and stuff," Peterson said. FIVE. Taking the ball past a defender, freshman #20 Emma Buday tries to get past an Elk Rapids player. "We were playing Elk Rapids, and I tackled that girl and took the ball," Buday said. SIX. Taking a defender on, sophomore #23 Lily Curtis splits the defense. "I was just doing my 'thang.' I was fighting for the ball from the other team," Curtis said. "We didn't take the win, but I think we still played really hard against them."

back and forth battles

by Kenzi Cunningham

To say the March 6 district opener was a heart breaker would be an understatement. With the whole game a back and forth battle, Boyne City in the end pulled ahead by one three pointer.

"We had great effort. We looked forward to the District game; we were very happy with how the team played. We knew we could compete with them," coach Matt Stuck said.

That game was an accurate representation of how the season went with many games coming right down to the buzzer. The Rayders faced tough losses throughout the season with a 50-52 lose to Bellaire in overtime, a 71-72 lose to Grayling, and a 49-50 lose to Elk Rapids. The outcomes of these games didn't depict the hard work throughout the season though.

Charlevoix also defeated many teams with a 70-45 win to East Jordan, a 54-27 win to Mancelona, and a 65-37 win to St. Ignace.

"This season was made great by how hard the team practiced and played and how we as coaches could see them get better with every game. Our goal all season was to be that team that nobody wanted to play, and I truly believe we achieved that goal," Stuck said.

Everyone on team made a great impact in the outcome of the season.

"We carried 14 players so finding playing time for everyone wasn't always possible, so the guys on the team that practiced hard every day to push their teammates and themselves to get better are the team's unsung heroes. We as coaches were very fortunate to have kids that continued to work hard despite limited playing time," Stuck said.

Looking to score, senior #32 Kevin Pearl shoots a three. Pearl said, "I'm bummed that basketball is over." Pearl was a starter for the Rayders.

What's your legacy?

Camden Musilek's role on the team was just to do his job, by making his shots, stroking it from the corner like Ron Baker, and when in doubt making sure to pass the ball to Bradley Klinger (Shaq) or Kevin Pearl (Kobe).

"I really enjoyed the growth of our team as a whole, as well as the company of several other members of the team such as, Tyler Fuchs (Zaza), Hunter Jenson (Dirk), and Joshua Carlson (Henry Ellenson)," Musilek said.

The legacy he wanted to make on the team was to just have fun, bring some laughter to the locker room, and improve his skills as a player on the court. Musilek said, "The role change from JV to varsity was made easier when you have stud seniors like Brad and Kevin. It made me happy whenever they even thought about passing me the ball, so I would just like to thank them for blessing me with their presence, and I can only hope to achieve what they have."

ONE. Going for a layup, senior #44 Bradley Klinger helps get Charlevoix on the board in a 44-54 early season lose. "'Big Dan' looks good in his jersey, and filled it out nicely," Klinger said about fellow teammate junior Daniel Nesburg. Klinger dual sported and was also on the ski team. TWO. Dribbling past an opponent, junior #20 Joshua Carlson goes in for a layup but has to pass. "I had just snapped that kid's ankles and got by him with ease. I had to pass it to Brad though, because he had to get his shots up," Carlson said. THREE. Marking up on a player, junior #12 Daniel Nesburg contributes to a 46-36 home win over Harbor Springs. "After the first game, our only goal was to get better, but we got so much better throughout the season, some might say we're Breslin bound," Nesburg said. FOUR. Looking for an open teammate, junior #52 Colin Smith brings the ball down the court. "This season was a blast, although our sesason didn't necessarily reflect it. The seniors were fun to joke around with and made this season enjoyable," Smith said. FIVE. Looking for a pass, senior #14 Luke Buday dribbles during a 49-50 loss to Elk Rapids. Buday said, "We had a super fun senior year." SIX. Calling for the ball, senior #10 Cameron Clark gets open for a pass. Clark said, "layups were my specialty this season."

By Ben Peterson

For junior Rachel Nesburg, sitting the bench all of her sophomore year and watching her team struggle was not what she had planned.

Nesburg had broken her leg in a horrible soccer accident the fall of her sophomore year. Nesburg had to sit out half of her cross country season and all of basketball season.

"It sucked" Nesburg said.

This season though, Nesburg was off the bench and off the crutches, ready to tackle the whole season.

"I was glad I was there to support the team," Nesburg said.

The team fought back this season though. Winning the district title and making it to the regional championships.

Standouts on the team were freshman Elise Stuck, junior Rachel Nesburg and freshman Abigail Cunningham.

"I was impressed with Abby's improvements and progression she demonstrated throughout the season," coach Shaw said. Abby got better every game.

Looking tough, #4 junior Rachel Nesburg rushes down the court. "Rachel was the sole captain of the team," coach Shaw said.

comeback kids

The girl's basketball team will go down in history for having the best comeback ever. Going from their 2016 record of 3-19, to their impressive record of 18-7. The even more impressive thing is that they only had two new girls on varsity. Elise Stuck and Abigail Cunningham.

"The biggest difference between this year and last was their heart and hard work battling last year and never giving up. We were true to fundamentals, and we came together as a team."

The team rallies together for another thrilling game in their 2017 career.

by Abigail Cunningham

The JV girls had a season record of 9-11. The three highest scorers where sophomores Kaitlin Schwenke (112 points.) Payton Novotny with (124 points) and Lily Curtis with (123 points.)

"Everyone has their own job to help get the ball down the court, and I just had the honor to finish it," Schwenke said.

The JV girls all together had a total of 880 points throughout the entire season.

"We didn't really have captains, which worked better so we were equal and nobody really acted better or in charge of anyone else," Schwenke said.

The JV girls also had lots of fun throughout the season. Listening to music and eating homemade treats their coach would make them.

"We would always just jam out in the locker room before games, it really calmed the nerves cause we could laugh and joke around. Sometimes at practice freshmen Emma Wachler or Emma Buday would hook up their phones through the stereo system and we'd listen to music," Schwenke said.

Freshman Ella Gaffney was on her first high school basketball team in the winter.

"Being on my first high school basketball team was almost exactly like 8th grade basketball, because I was on the freshman team, and we only had about 10 games which is like the middle school," Gaffney said.

Although the freshman went 1-9 they had fun during practice.

"The atmosphere in practice and during games is a good atmosphere. Our team got along well with each other which helps in a team sport," Gaffney said.

Dribbling the ball is sophomore Kaitlin Schwenke. "I was so afraid I'd mess up, but I realized it didn't matter cause no one is perfect and all games your gonna mess up even a good one," Schwenke said.

Ben Lentz: Playing up

Going from middle school to high school can be a transition, but going from 8th grade basketball to the JV team, for some can be even more intimidating. Fortunately, that wasn't the case for freshman Benjamin Lentz.

"I didn't think anything of it because there were five freshman on the team," Lentz said.

In addition to Lentz, Cole Wright, Blaise Snabes, Luke Stuck and Alan Ritter also joined the JV players as freshmen.

Lentz noted that all the freshmen who were on the team earned their sports.

"I was pretty happy and excited I was going to play up," Lentz added.

Let this be prefaced by the fact that the JV/freshmen boys did not light the world on fire with a stunning streak to the junior varsity finals, if such a thing were to exist. With a purely materialistic approach to sports, the season could be constituted as one to forget.

"We managed to lose every game," freshmen Joseph Scafidi said.

However, sports are more than black and white numbers scribbled in a score book to be lost to the annals of time in a musty coach's room. Sports are a distinctly human activity, with the establishment of the ancient

The human element was on conspicuous display for the boy's season, with players describing having "grown as a player and a man," and " Love(ing) the way freshman Chasyn Vrondran smiled."

They grew together, forged in the crucible of competition and mutual labor.

"What made me proud was how we kept the motivation up while we still losing," freshman Chasyn Vrondran said.

This was further attested to by freshmen Tyler Ostrum, saying "How Chayse would walk on the court with a smile no matter how bad we were losing."

father and son

Mike Hinkle has been coaching the Charlevoix High School wrestling team for five years and has "no plan to stop at this point." One wrestler he is very close to is sophomore Max Hinkle.

"My dad coaching me is just like having someone else be my coach; he treats me the same as all the other wrestlers," Max said.

Mike said that he thinks when someone coaches his own kids, there is always a chance that you could be perceived as giving preferential treatment.

"I'm fortunate because with wrestling that is not really possible. To earn a spot in the line-up, a wrestler has to beat anyone else that wants the spot," Mike said. Michael and Max Hinkle both agree that a father son combo does nothing but help for the great of the overall team.

Taking down his opponent is sophomore Max Hinkle. Hinkle ended the season with 32 wins and 17 loses. One of the highlights was his third place at the Manton invite.

Taking down his opponent is senior Camden Alden. Alden finished the season with 29 wins and All-State Honorable mention. He credits his success to his mom pushing him to join the team.

"The wrestling team has given me a better chance to get into colleges," senior three time state qualifier, and six year wrestler Camden Alden said.

Alden said, "What made it amazing along with that I qualified for states this year, was seeing Jeremy Chernauckas at his first year at states and being right next to him through the Rayder state send off!"

Alden said, "In everyday life wrestling teaches you commitment and dedication. I love mind/ body control behind it." He added that in wrestling you get to be apart of something and learn valuable life lessons.

In addition to Chernauckas and Alden making to the state finals, they were also All-State Honorable Mention earning second and third place (respectively) at the tournament.

Highlights of the season included a 17 and 8 dual meet record and winning against Traverse City St. Francis and Grayling.

Senior Jordan Chernauckas had the most wins of the season with 37.

"Our goals include: enhanced athleticism through disciplined hard work, mental toughness and confidence.

"One of the best things you can learn from wrestling is how to maintain control in a difficult, competitive and confrontational situation," coach Michael Hinkle said.

At the top of the ski hill, sophomore Jenna Good skis her way into the state finals and makes her way to a great legacy! Good was a fierce competitor and had great team work, which helped her get to where she is today.

Good was ranked 3rd over all in both giant slalom and slalom in the Lake Conference meets. Good got into skiing when she was five and has been skiing ever since. Her brother and she both share the same skills and share the love of the snowy hills.

"I think the season went really well. I was very proud that we had a full team the majority of the season and the girls who stuck with it keep getting better and better. I also think the girls had a lot of fun and that's what matters. Certainly we did pretty well as a team and individually, and I am proud to say that Abbey and Jenna got to compete states," coach Pete Scholten said.

Jenna Good also got 7th in regional giant slalom. She also got 15th in states giant slalom.

Jenna got into skiing do to the fact of her house being across from the Mount McSauba ski hill.

"My house was right across from the ski hill," Good said. She joined the ski team because she had been previously ski racing before hand.

"I had been racing before, so I thought I would join the team," Good said.

The team as a whole worked had this winter to get where they are and made great progress and next year hopefully they will come back even stronger.

"I like seeing the team do well and progress to be better," Megan Scholten said.

by Abbey Scholten

After spending three years competing on the varsity ski team, senior Matthew Good finished his high school career with all-state honors in giant slalom earning a 7th place finish overall. Good made states three years in a row. Good came back strong and determined from a broken arm freshman year and made states the rest of his high school skiing career.

Coach Scholten states, "Good is one of the most determined athletes I have worked with the past three years. He's a true team leader and role model to all. He's extremely positive and encourages the team to succeed. Matt would always be the first one on the hill to help set the course at practice and the last one off."

This seasons has had its ups and downs due to poor weather conditions, but the team fought through it together. The boys team didn't make it to State finals as a team this year, but the overall improvement in each racer increased fast throughout the season.

Coach Scholten said that he, "enjoyed watching each skier individually improve and working with such positive athletes."

The boy's team ranked 3rd overall in the Lake Michigan Conference. Individuals Bradley Klinger and Matthew Good were honorable mention in Slalom and All - Conference in Giant Slalom.

Bradley Klinger Leaving His Legacy

Bradley Klinger is preparing to cross block a gate at the state meet and tries to find the fastest race line to the finish. Klinger stated, "I started racing when I was only five years old. I started off racing Northern Michigan Ski Academy throughout my elementary school years, then got into a more serious race program, Boyne racing, at age ten for two years. I raced in USSA races at age ten. I then switched over to Win Alpine race team and have stuck with that all throughout my high school career. I've been to November camp in Colorado twice with this team and went to the Junior Olympics at Winter Park twice and Steamboat Springs twice." Senior Bradley Klinger ends his ski racing career with a 2nd place finish in Slalom and 4th place finish in Giant Slalom at the division 2 state finals located at Boyne Highlands.

ONE. While trying to get on the edge of his ski, senior David Ritter carves out a giant slalom turn. Ritter says "I joined ski team to learn how to ski! I like to see the improvements I make every race. TWO. Junior, Walker Fogel pressures his outside ski. Fogle completed his season season with a ton of improvements from the help of his teammates, seniors Bradley Klinger and Matt Good. Fogle's best finish was at Crystal Mountain placing 7th in Giant Slalom. Fogle states "this was my favorite race because the team overall worked hard to take home the 1st place trophy." Fogel prefers racing on Fischer skis for giant slalom and Head skis for slalom. THREE. Sophomore, Andrew Baten tucking to the finish line ends the last lake conference race of the season at Nubs Nobs Nob. Baten said, "the most memorable part of this season was all the friends I made from the other race teams." Batten was thrilled he got to finish out this season because last season ended early do to an injury.

FOUR. Sophomore Addison Bemis shreds a turn and is getting ready to start his next. Bemis had trouble this year finishing a race course without falling, but next year he strives to finish each race with fast times. Bemis aka "Chicken Man" said his favorite race was the Boyne Mountain invitational because he "sent it and made it count" finishing top ten in giant slalom. FIVE. Junior, Keon Taylor gets low and prepares to finish out an awesome turn in his favorite event giant slalom. Taylor plans to achieve his goal once again and go to states his senior year. Taylor states "the season went very well, unfortunately the boys team didn't make it to states this year, but we are striving for next years regionals." SIX. Freshman Jake Conway gets low and tries to carry his speed to the finish line. Coach Scholten said, "Conway brought a lot of positive energy to the team and had a great first high school season." Conway couldn't decide on what race was his favorite but he did say, "every race was a good race when Mrs. Good brought chicken wings."

Driving through with a powerful swing, senior #6 Brad Klinger hits a ball to the outfield against rival Elk Rapids. Klinger averaged 32 percent at the plate and got 22 runs.

building a legacy

The varsity baseball team, with a legacy of success and triumph, underwent many changes as the team had had to "power through" this season.

Having a fairly young team, the program had a lot to adapt to for present competition and a lot to look forward to for the future. Coach Nick Vuillemot understood just what it takes to fulfill the Rayder legacy.

"The season has gone well. However, we realize the dedication it takes to move from a good team to a great team, and we are progressing in that direction," Vuillimot said.

Vuillemot said the youngness of the team contributed to the team not getting the district championship.

He noted there were only three seniors (Brad Klinger, Christian Matye and James Spencley). And, although the team was disappointed, they definitely learned every since game.

In the last six games they lost by three runs or less. What hurt the team was not getting a big play or a big run.

"We were right in every game just waiting for someone to get that big hit," Vuillemot said.

Vuillemot pointed to seniors Christian Matye, Bradley Klinger and sophomore Michael Pearsall who all received All-Conference honors, with Pearsall receiving honorable mention. In addition, Matye was All-Region.

Vuillemot said the senior leadership of Matye and Klinger prepared the teams for every game as well as for the future. An example was this was mentoring sophomore Michael Pearsall.

"Michael Pearsall worked himself up to the starting line-up," Vuillemot said. "The first time he hit the ball on varsity, he made it to base."

In addition to Pearsall being moved to varsity, freshman Benjamin Lentz was brought up to play in districts.

moving forward with wins

Playing baseball is an intense sport, from throwing down to sliding into base. Sophomore Nathan Pearl likes to do both.

Pearl had been playing baseball since fourth grade and has loved it every year.

"I've loved baseball ever since fourth grade; I guess I'm just drawn to it," Pearl told.

And although Pearl is a good player, it of course doesn't come naturally.

"The most difficult thing about baseball for me would be hitting the ball," Pearl said.

Coach Morgan Stewart lauded Pearl as a great team leader.

"Nate was our caption, and he did really well," Stewart said.

Pearl along with freshman Benjamin Lentz led the team through to their 14-9 record.

These two, along with the rest of the team had to step-up when other players had were out with injuries or were moved up to varsity.

"Freshman Luke Stuck was out with an injury for part of the season, but then came back and was a great hitter," Stewart said.

The JV Softball team had a learning year. And, although the scores didn't always go their way coach Olach said it was impressive that this was the school's second year that Charlevoix has had a JV team.

"While the road has been tough, this year's team showed poise and determination by having a "never give up" attitude, something that coach Sonia Dorst showed the team how to do," Olach said.

He said this team can be proud to know they helped build the foundation on which the Charlevoix Girls Softball Program can grow and succeed.

Catching for the Rayders is #11 Cheyenne Sprague. Sprague was only a freshman on the team, but was immediately placed as a catcher. She credits her success to senior Nichole Hart. "Cheyenne is a lefty and that's rare," coach Tom Mielke said.

Balls flying to you at speeds up to 60 mph. Using your body as a shield to stop the flying balls. Bruises blossom onto their skin. Just the life of a catcher.

"I love my position as catcher. It's the only position I know. I've always been a catcher. I mean sure, it hurts when a ball hits where there isn't padding, but still a ton of fun. The pain is numbed out because of the excitement. I can count five visible bruises at this very moment, but wouldn't trade it for the world," freshman Cheyenne Sprauge said.

Sprague was a catcher on the varsity team. But being a freshman on the varsity team wasn't always easy.

"I didn't really know anyone when the season started. I was taken under the wing of one of the senior players, Nichole Hart. She's become like a sister to me. I'm so excited to wear her number next year. I can't wait to make her proud," Sprauge said.

The seniors on the team took a special liking to Sprauge.

"I loved playing with her. We wanted to make her feel welcome. I know that it's not always easy when you don't know anyone. I love how much we have bonded and have become like sisters throughout this season, and I love our little Chey," Hart said.

The overall season was a success with many honors for the players. Seniors Nichole Hart and McKenna Ebert earned All-District and All-Conference.

Coach Tom Mielke said the senior leadership was outstanding with Hart, Kara Simpson and Ebert taking on leadership roles. He noted that Simpson started the year at first base and finished at third and was also named All-Conference.

Junior Shelby Wurst was the team's number pitcher and continued to improve throughout the season.

Mielke noted that sophomore Hannah Solomon was the "core" of the team. He said she was one of the toughest players in northern Michigan. She was the team's lead of batter (making it on base 70% of the time).

"It made a difference in our game and team when Hannah was on the field," Mielke said.

A sultry sun lays upon the two brothers. Hazel smoke drifts from a distant barbecue, the ashen smell making the day surprisingly lucid. If one leans close enough, you can smell the faint scent of sweat emitting from the track. The crowd bellows rancorously, urging on a Rayder victory.

The Rayder boy's track team had four sets of brothers competing this year, with each having at least a grade differential.

"He's a punk, but I love running with him. He's been doing great at the long jump," freshman Sean Bradley said of older brother and state qualifier Nicholas Bradley.

"I don't know how he managed to keep his hair fresh throughout, but he did," sophomore Levi Carson said of state champion brother Noah Carson. Levi competed in the shot put for the Rayders helping to form the tight-knit group of throwers that the Rayders relied on for team points.

"That boy is still living in my long, long, shadow. I'm sorry for that," junior Philip Conway said of freshmen brother Jake. " I could totally out disc that punk," Conway Jr. said.

These brother teams help propel the Rayders to win after win dominating the northern Michigan track circuit. The season was capped off with a Conference Championship (the eighth in a row), Regional Championship, and fourth pace at the State Meet.

"We had an amazing season," coach Nick Barnum said.

dueling sports

by Benjamin Peterson

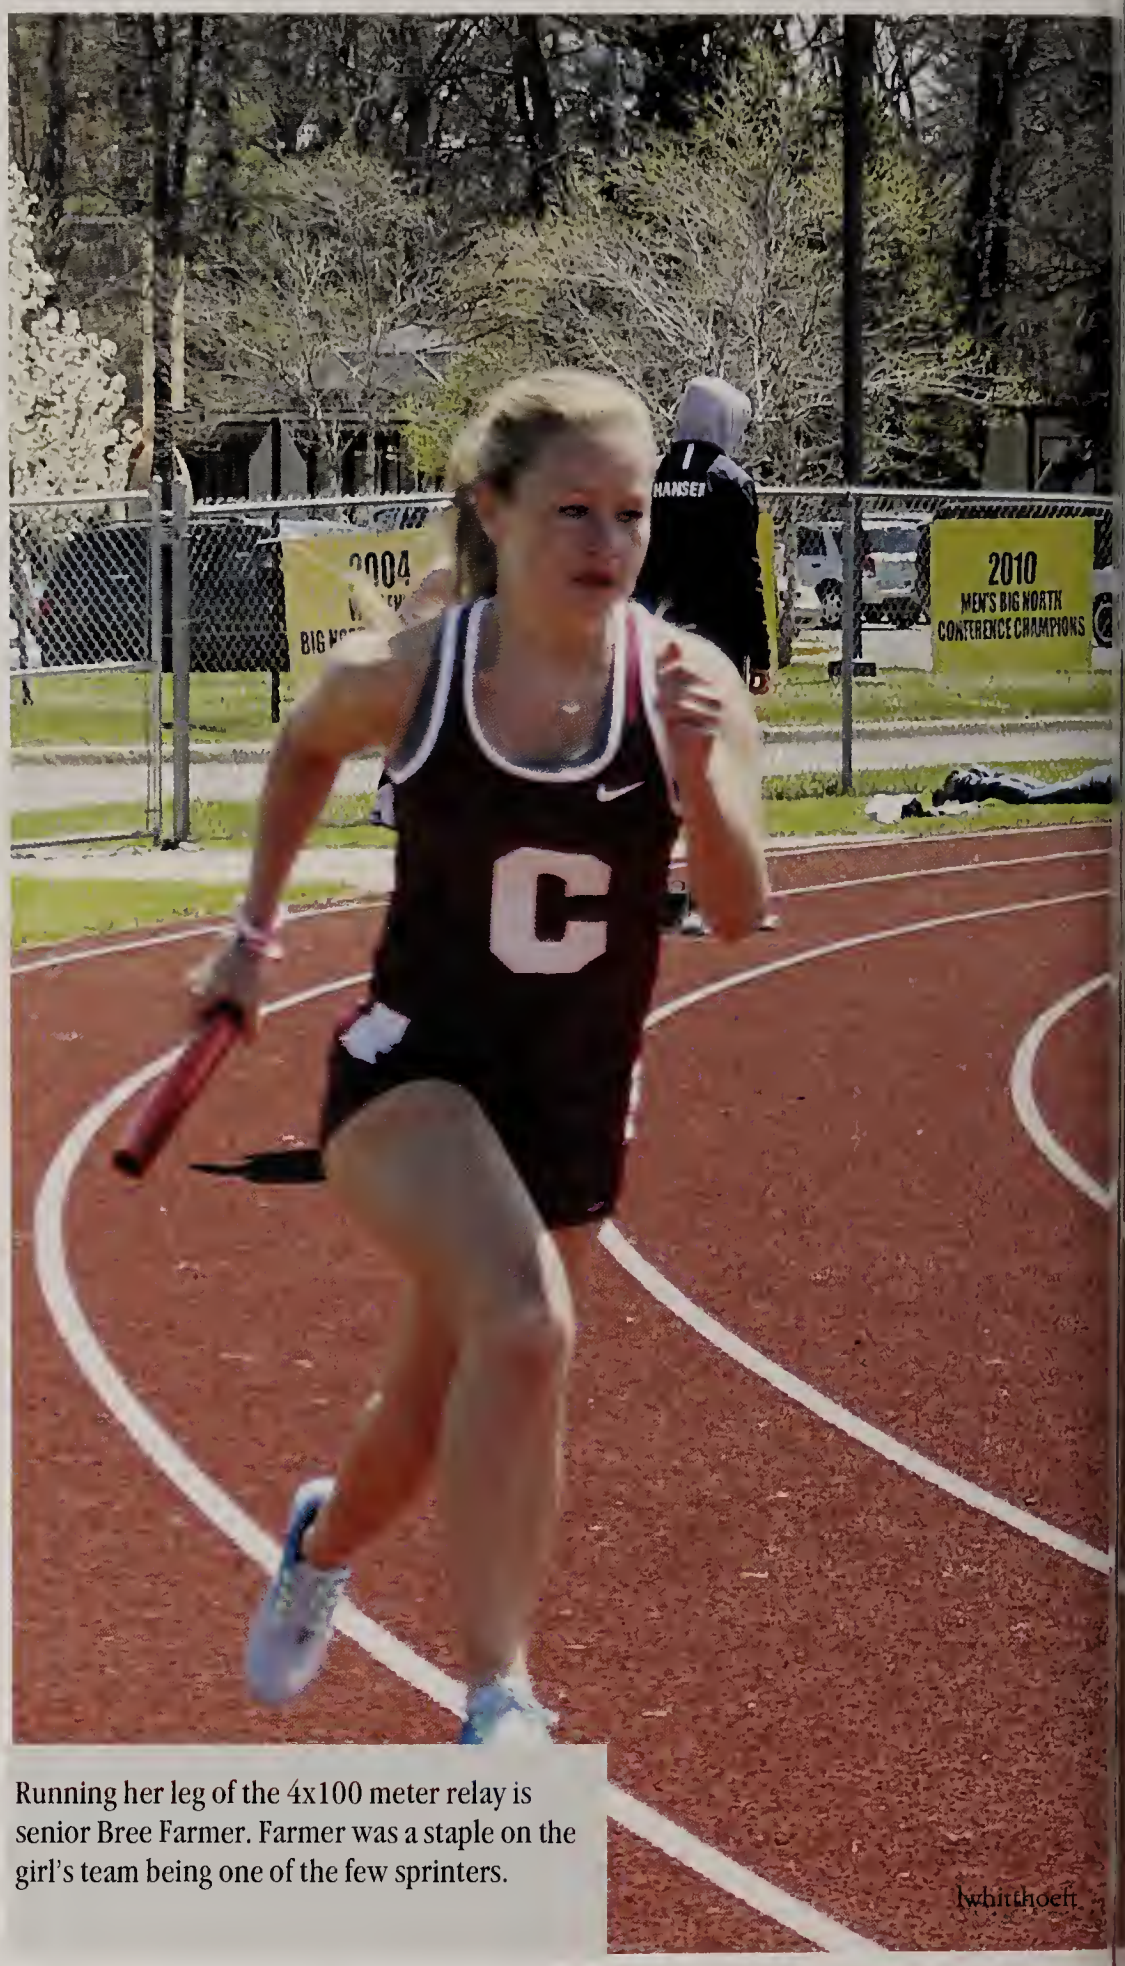
Just 28 girls made up the Charlevoix track and field team. Nine of those girls dual sported, some did soccer too, and some did softball.

They would all come together to compete and do great on race day though, where showing up matters the most.

Senior Bree Farmer though, didn't dual sport, but rather showed up to practice every day and did her best. Competing in regionals the 4x1 in regionals and her team narrowly missing the final qualifying spot for the MHSAA state championships.

Other girls on the team were more successful than that 4x1 by qualifying for the MHSAA championships. Junior Michelle Bollini, seniors Mackenzy O'Leary and Lukila Witthoeft, sophomore Kaitlin Schwenke and freshmen Elise Stuck and Emma Wachler were all successful in qualifying in various events such as the high jump and 4x8.

At the state Championships the Rayders were victorious having two girls All-State. Freshman Elise Stuck was fifth in the high jump and junior Rachel Nesburg was fourth in the 200m dash.



Running her leg of the 4x100 meter relay is senior Bree Farmer. Farmer was a staple on the girl's team being one of the few sprinters.

Yes, she can!

In addition to her successes in basketball and volleyball, freshman Elise Stuck was also a very up and coming track star.

Qualifying for the state finals this year in two events, the high jump and 300 meter hurdles made Elise a stand-out athlete in the region.

At the finals, Stuck earned a 6th place finish and All-State honors in the high jump. Unfortunately, she was unable to compete in the 300 hurdles because on the last attempt of the high jump she injured her knee.

Like most, Sarah Moon didn't get to start playing tennis until high school.

"I have been playing tennis since freshman year," Moon said.

Even though Moon has only been playing for four years, she is the number one flight player.

"My serve became very strong this senior year and earned me a lot of points by aces," Moon said.

Since Moon had been on the tennis team for four years, she had a lot of time to perfect, change, and learn new things.

"I like to play tennis because it is something I can always improve on, and I love the team atmosphere and making friends through the conference through the game," Moon said.

While Moon was in her junior and senior year, she had the same coach for her two sports she had played. Moon played both varsity tennis and varsity volleyball.

"I am not playing on a team in college for tennis, but I'm sure I will spend some of my free time playing, especially in the summer for fun," Moon said.

At the regional competition Moon who was seed #1 for the girls tennis team was seeded 4th at the match and lost in the semi finals.

"Sarah is a quiet leader. Her biggest improvement is her calmness within herself during her matches. A lot of stuff goes on in your head and by any means all players can be susceptible. When put under pressure, she was more about reading her opponent, what were the weaknesses for that player and watching how the tempo of when certain weaknesses showed up during a match," head coach Audra Randall said.

As senior Sarah Moon goes to hit the ball, she plays a match against Grayling. "This was in Grayling, and I beat her 6-2, 6-2 in this match," Moon said.

Being the freshmen on any varsity team can be a little scary sometimes or overwhelming, shocking or impressive, but athletes have their coaches and teammates to help coach them along the way. Such is the case for freshman Abagail Paramo.

"I was excited to play on a team, since I had only been playing against my family and friends throughout the year. I learned a lot from my coaches, teammates and myself," freshmen Abagail Paramo said.

Playing a varsity sport not only lets athletes make so many amazing memories with the new people that you meet on your team, but also the people you play. A single match could last up to three hours or more.

"Once I played East Jordan in a tournament and the match lasted three hours, which let me continue to finals, and led to winning in the finals," Paramo said.

going for it

by Allex Smith

Ending the season with a bang, senior Isabel Hess joins the Northwood University team for her college years.

Hess will miss the Rayders and the girls who she worked with, but she is excited for her new adventures with her new team. Hess, who was outside back and sweeper said, "this season is really bittersweet, since it was the last time she would play with these girls." She noted the team was fairly new with a lot of freshmen and sophomores, but they have learned to play together and she was really proud of how far everyone had come.

"Individually, our skills have improved on the varsity team with the help of our three amazing coaches and Billy Foster," Hess said.

"What made this team unique was our ability to stay positive in any situation and to always be there to support each other on and off the field. I'm grateful to have spent the past four years with these girls, and I can't wait to see how far we make it," said Hess.

Like Hess, senior Mikaya Dixon was also finished her last year playing.

"This year we started out very strong, which made me really exited for the rest of my last soccer season, " Dixon said.

Junior Abbey Scholten noted that the seniors had been good role models for the underclassmen on the team, because they learn a lot from them, and they also know that they will need to step up to the plate when they leave.

These seniors along with the rest of team helped propel the girls to district champs. They ended the season with a heartbreaking game to Freeland losing 0-5.

"It was an outstanding season with outstanding players," coach Pete Scholten said.

ONE: Running to the ball, junior #12 Rachel Nesburg leaves it all out on the field. "I like soccer, because it's fun to play on a team with all your friends, and we work well together," Nesburg said. Nesburg dual sported and was also on the track team. TWO: Racing a Petoskey opponent, freshman #26 Jenna Good gets to the ball first."Our whole team was a lot of fun; everyone had a ton of fun," Good said. THREE: Jumping up, senior #1 Julia Doskoch heads the ball. "I'm really proud of how everyone works in games and in practices. I'm exited to see how far we will go this year," Doskoch said. FOUR: Pushing back another player, junior #9 Raigan Novotny gets physical. "I love playing with my friends, and I think we all work pretty well together," Novotny said. FIVE: Being first to the ball, senior #10 Mikaya Dixon dribbles down the field. "Rayder soccer is something I'll always cherish and remember," Dixon said. SIX: Cutting off a shot, senior #13 Alison Jarema gets in front of the ball. "I love soccer, because there is a ton of different things you can do to make the game more fun," Jarema said.

A litte about Abbey Scholten

"My favorite thing about soccer is that it's always a team effort to win," said #8 junior Abbey Scholten who has been playing soccer for a very long time and is happy to be a varsity player . Abbey has improved this year and throughout her soccer career by learning from her mistakes, which has helped her out a lot. Scholten said that these challenges are meant to occur to make her more successful at what she does. Abbey hopes to kick butt the rest of her season and is also very exited for her senior year.

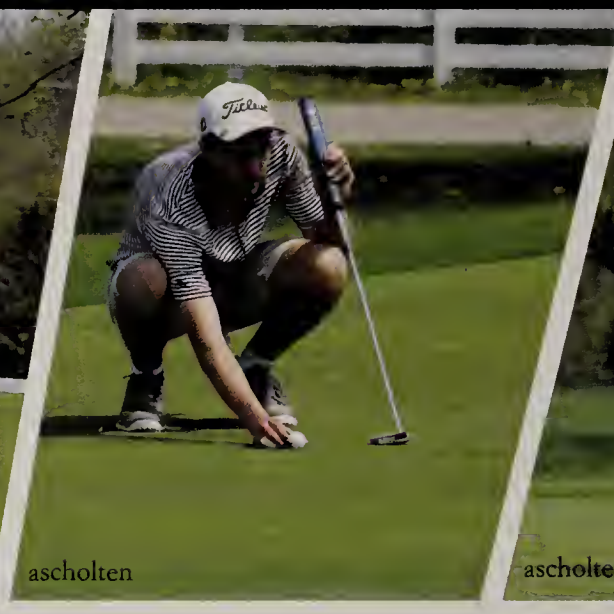
Senior Tyler Fuchs putts for par at the Belvedere Golf Club. His best score this season was a 74 at the Charlevoix Country Club. Fuchs said, "My favorite part of this season is when the team won regionals."

ascholten

Junior Walker Fogle tries to find the best place to putt his ball closest to the hole. Fogle said his favorite course he's played this year was the Belvedere because the team did very well, and it's our home course.



ascholten

Junior Spencer Haan lines up his ball to to the hole. His personal best score was an 85 at the Grayling Country Club. Spencer decided to play golf instead of baseball and has absolutely fallen in love with the sport. Haan said, "that joining the golf team was a great decision because the practices don't feel like practices."

Senior, Matthew Good tends the flag for an opponent while golfing at the Belvedere tournament. Good individually won regionals at the course "Nightmare" shooting a 72. Good said that he loved watching the team improve. "We have come a long way." Good went on to win the state championships in a play-off.

ONE. Chipping to the green, freshman Blaise Snabes hopes for the ball to land close to the hole for an easy putt. Snabes was a key player on the J.V team. His favorite competition was the Boyne Mountain tournament because, "the course was challenging, but fun," Snabes said. His "biggest improvement this year was his short game." TWO. Junior Camden Musilek focuses on his fairway shot and has made tremendous improvements throughout his high school career on the team shaving over thirty strokes. Musilek said, "my best score this season was an 85 at the course "Nightmare" in West Branch Michigan. THREE. Putting for a low score, freshman Tyler Ostrum plays hard in the Traverse City tournament. Ostrum was a dual sport athlete balancing time for both golf and baseball. Ostrum said that he was happy to compete at a varsity level to receive his first varsity letter this year. FOUR. Senior Matthew Good takes a water break during a round of golf at the Indian River golf course. He shot a 81 in this tournament. This was their first tournament of the season and Good said, "the team has made huge improvements from the beginning of the season." Good finished the season as the state champion shooting a 75 in a playoff. FIVE. Junior Hunter Jenson follows through with the ball. Jenson had made tremendous improvement from his last year on the team. Jenson said what he improved most at was, "my putting and swing path." Jenson's goal for next year is to make it to states once again.

Putting for a low score, senior Collin Turkelson makes a long putt competing in the Charlevoix Classic tournament held at the Belvedere Club. Turkelson had been a member of the golf team throughout his high school career. Turkelson's goal he stuck with throughout the season was to work really hard on improving his swing path.

Turkelson said, "the biggest challenge I've faced this year was trying not over think my my swing thought."

Coach Keith Grunch said, "Collin has made a huge improvement from his freshman year by being more consistent with his swing and mentally not thinking too much about his swing."

Grunch also was amazed by seniors Matthew Good and Tyler Fuchs this season.

Grunch said, "Matt has been an outstanding captain and team leader. Matt has a fantastic work ethic and has the motivation to be the best. Tyler has made the most improvement out of everyone on the team. He has one of the best attitudes and his short game has improved drastically."

The team has been very successful this year winning multiple tournaments and even winning Regionals and placing 8th at the state tournament.

Besides team wins, senior Matt Good earned the title of "State Champion" at the state tournament shooting a 75 and winning during a play-off.

Grunch said, "Our senior leadership and the drive to keep getting better each athlete had is what lead the team to success."

Putting at the Belvedere Golf Club is senior Collin Turkelson. Turkelson was a member of the team for his four years in high school.

ONE. Pigs Eating Ribs moved into a restaurant style new building next to McDonalds. "I dig it and will lose lots of money there probably," senior Luke Buday said. TWO, SIX & FOUR A favorite in town, Johan's Cafe burned down in November. "I'll miss having the option to go there," junior Michelle Bollini said. Johan's was a hot spot for coffee and bagles.

THREE. Two new gas stations came into town, one on the north side and one on the south. "I like hanging out with my friends there," junior Kenzi Cunningham said. The gas station features a small grocery store.

FIVE. Boarded up with wood, Johan's Cafe rests in the ashes of its fire. In addition to Johan's burning, two other stores also burned, The Round Lake Art Studio and Charlevoix Wear. Charlevoix Wear moved a block down the road while the other two businesses have remained closed.

The Christmas Eve morning fire at Cherry Republic left the town in flames. It was determined the cause of the fire was from a small shed behind the building.

Special thank you to principal Mrs. Suzanne Klinger, for leaving us alone and letting us do our "thing." It's nice to have a principal who trusts us! Thank you the the CHS teachers for being patient with us as we gather information, and sometimes get a little noisy in the hall. To the coaches for getting us scores (sometimes a couple times). To Mrs. Arnold for helping with roster numbers and names. To RuthAnn Brown, for proofing all our pages and helping in the summer months put this book to bed! To the custodians for letting students in room B200 after hours who forgot lenses, SD cards, batteries or cameras. To our community for supporting a 200 page color yearbook. We couldn't do this without you! There aren't a lot of schools our size who have this size yearbook. You have all helped us leave a legacy.

editor's note:

Sitting here at 11 o'clock on June 27th, trying to come up with an editor's note, pretty much sums up what yearbook is.

When looking back at the year, it's hard not to focus on all the mornings of Cloe complaining about AP government and how awful it was, (even though I never complained and she usually did better than I did on assignments). Or, to think about Allex listening to Beyoncé way too loud for the health of his ears, and Shaelyn's hilarious comments.

Most mornings, Mrs. Peterson our teacher, had to go out in the hall so she could get her work done because we would be too busy having great life conversations.

But between all this non yearbook work, we worked hard together on creating this book - which I believed turned out quite nicely, even though I had to do most of the work behind the scenes since I had yearbook in an independent hour.

Thank you students for working so hard and allowing me to help guide your work. Yearbook has taught me an abundance of great things, I only hope it did the same for you. It's been a good run these past three years and I hope the next ones are even better in every aspect. - Editor-in-Chief Lukila Witthoeft adviser's note:

Wow! Another book "in the books." Things I'll remember about this year...Maggie - you made me smile everyday. Abby - the more pages you did the better you did. I'm grateful for you always trying to do better and better. Dani - The #1 volunteer for photos. Ben - Just when I am about you get made at you for being a slacker, you surprise me. Jacob - It was always fun to see your twist on subjects. Bac - There is lasagna in my frig if you are hungry again. Becca - You are so sweet and I feel privileged to know you. Allex - Beyonce announcing she's having twins...I can still see the look on your face. Abbey - You caught on faster than almost anyone I've ever had in the class. Aria - Awesome job...I wish I had a Lazy Boy for you to rest your feet on. Micayle - Your legacy is all the great pics you took. Tyvin - I'll miss talking politics with you. Caleb - Your easy going way will serve you well. Seth - You were always willing to try something new. Kenzi - You are always willing to tell it like it just as you see it. Chris...hmmmm.... . Lea - Our girl from Denmark. Sydney...you helped us keep the fun in the class. Bailey - You always pulled a tick out of your hat....and my 1st hour crew: Shaelyn- your weekend adventures were always fun to hear about. Cloe (a.k.a. Alex....) & Lukila -the list is too long of what I will miss about you two... your smiles, your work ethic, your positive attitudes, your willingness to do more and make it better. I'm excited to see what the future brings for you both. Go, Lakers & Go, Bulldogs. I hope you keep in touch. I feel lucky and privileged to have had you in class the last three years. - kp

leave a legacy

Students eagerly await under the Friday night lights as the homecoming football game progresses. The Rayder team proved victorious in defeating the Red Devils from East Jordan 27 to 0.
